'Green Energy' From Poultry Litter Possible

MICHELLE KUNJAPPU

MANHEIM (Lancaster Co.) — Approximately 20 poultry and allied industry representatives learned about alternative poultry by-products utilization at a meeting sponsored by Penn State Extension Service at Kreider's Restaurant Monday.

Dr. Lewis Carr, extension biological resources engineer for the University of Maryland, presented results of his latest work at the Lower Eastern Shore Research and Education Center, Princess Anne, Md.

Carr discussed the physical characteristics of litter, poultry litter as a combustible "green energy" source, and composting avenues to recycle the material.

Whole and caked litter, said Carr, weighs approximately 32-34 pounds per cubic foot, respectively, and has 15-20 percent ash content. Most litter has a pH of 8-8.3 and its primary nutrient — at 71 pounds per ton of litter — is nitrogen. Phosphorus is another primary nutrient. Secondary nutrients include calcium, magnesium, and sulfur, among others.

The typical poultry operation will produce 1-1.25 tons of litter (feces, urine, and bedding) per one thousand birds per flock, according to Carr, who estimates that the Delmarva area produces 775,000 tons of poultry litter per year.

Recycling of this kind of volume could be achieved through direct land application, composting, cattle feed, organic fertilizer, or combustion to produce energy.

Carr has experimented on broiler litter in loose, ground, and pelletized forms as a biofuel. "Poultry liter can be used as a biomass fuel to generate electricity and steam," said Carr.

Understandably, the litter with

Pick-Your-Own Berry Season Begins On Sauder Farm May 20

NEW HOLLAND (Lancaster Co.) — Berry time is here. Due to a warmer March, the picking season is earlier than usual and much heralded by berry aficionados.

Growing the cheery red fruit isn't a job for the leisurely minded. Ask Harvey and Grace Sauder. The couple raise three acres of berries for their pick-your-own operation. Although the Sauders have a New Holland address, their 60-acre farm is actually tucked between Martindale and Fivepointville in eastern Lancaster County.

Generally sun brings sweeter berries. Despite some heavy rains this past week, Grace said the berries are looking really good for the fields that will open to customers on Monday, May 20. For the past two weeks, Grace had been picking early berries for customers and family.

For the Sauders and other growers, the berry season is an almost year-round operation.

For those considering planting berries, the Sauders have this advice: the year before planting, do everything possible to destroy all perennial weeds such as thistle, bindweed, dockweed, grasses, and others.

Sauder said the weeds can be destroyed through tillage or chemicals or a combination of both methods.

A soil test needs to be taken to determined fertilization recommended in July. Fumigation is necessary as a whole field treatment or the strips under black plastic mulch. If fumigating strips through the drip irrigation system, a three-week wait is required before planting for some fumigations.

Strawberry plugs must be ordered at least four weeks in advance of planting.

What Will Season Bring? Here Are Growers' Thoughts

Vegetable, Dairy Farmers Share Hopes

Under new Farm Bill, the average Pennsylvania dairy farm can expect a $5,600 check for slumping milk prices since last December, says a Pennsylvania Farm Bureau policy specialist.

LANCASTER (Lancaster Co.) — The 2002 season will bring potential weather risks as well as marketing opportunities for fruit and vegetable producers, according to Leon Ressler, Lancaster County extension director.

"The year has promise," he said. "The demand for locally-grown high quality produce has been growing."

An increasing number of customers are buying fresh produce at local roadside stands and at Lancaster County's two produce auctions. Local marketing infrastructures have been developing to meet that demand, according to Ressler.

The revival of farmer's markets in cities is another trend that bodes well for producers. Growers can tap that opportunity

KINZER (Lancaster Co.) and LOGANVILLE (York Co.) — The grazing season is generally on schedule for Roman Stoltzfoos, Kinzer, who operates a 200-acre grazing operation. His organic dairy includes 150 cows and 100 young stock. The farm is further diversified with hogs and 9,000 finished turkeys per year.

"We've had an excellent season so far. What we like is coolish weather — 50 or 60 degrees at night and 75 through the day. That's mostly what we've had, other than that one hot week there in early spring," said Stoltzfoos.

"Last year was a scorcher for us. We were significantly behind in hay and pasture yields because of the rain. We do irrigate but we're not set up to do without rain, we're set up to supplement it. Irrigation pays the best in years when you have reasonable rainfall." An irrigation system is "not insurance," said Stoltzfoos, since "it's pretty hard to replace what rain does."

Although the drought cost the farm thousands in lost income last year, said

New Holland Feeder Pig Auction

NEW HOLLAND, PA
May 15, 2002
Report Supplied By USDA

FEEDER PIGS: WEDNESDAY 485, LAST WEEK 561, LAST YEAR 853.

TREND: Compared to last week, feeder pigs not well tested but a lower undertone noted under 40 lbs. Slaughter pigs 20-23 lbs traded 8.00-20.00 lower on a light supply, with the 30-37 lbs trading 8.00-30.00 higher. Heavier weights not well tested but a higher undertone noted. Around 29 percent of the supply returned to feed. All pigs were weighed and graded on arrival and sold by the hundred weight.

New York Eggs
ATLANTA, GA.
Report Supplied By USDA

Prices continued unchanged on all sizes. The market tone was steady. Retail demand was light to moderate, usually better where featured. Extra large eggs were being advertised at 69 cents per dozen. Supplies were fully adequate for needs. The New York shell egg inventories decreased 22 percent and the New Jersey shell egg inventories were 28 percent less than a week ago.

PRICES TO RETAILERS, SALES TO VOLUME BUYERS, USDA GRADE A AND GRADE A, WHITE EGGS IN CARTONS, DELIVERED STORE DOOR, CENTS PER DOZEN: RANGE: Extra Large 50-54, Large 48-52, Medium 44-48.

New York Broilers/Fryers
ATLANTA, GA.
Report Supplied By USDA

Trucklot buying activity on ready-to-cook whole broiler/fryers was mostly fair to moderate. Offerings of the 3 pound and lighter birds were closely cleared and the heavier sizes were noted as in a better balance. Movement through retail and distributive channels was about fair. The market tone was steady to fully steady.

National Broiler Market At A Glance
Atlanta, Ga.
Report Supplied By USDA

Trade sentiment was steady to firm, mostly fully steady to firm. Movement into all channels was light to moderate, better where retail ads and fast food promotions were present, and also where seasonal interest was active. Supplies were balanced to closely cleared on light weights, at least adequate on heavier sizes. In parts of the Midwest, heavy rains and floods caused delays or cancellations of deliveries in spot areas.

In the parts structure, trading was limited with most needs met and regular commitments sufficient. Availability of all parts was more than adequate or available with some discounting on breast items noted to help clear. In production areas, live supplies were moderate. Weights were desirable to heavy, mostly desirable.

Northeast Broiler Fryer Parts Part I

ATLANTA, GA.
Report Supplied By USDA

Trucklot buying activity was mostly fair and noted as typical of midweek trading, however, most dealers were cautious and content to work from hand-to-mouth. Offerings of bone-in breasts were fully adequate and available at discounted levels. Boneless-skinless breasts were at least adequate but clearing well. Dark meat cuts were fully sufficient. Wings and tenderloins were ample. Movement through retail and distributive channels was about fair with the occasional feature providing best draw. The market tone was weak on bone-in breasts, cautiously steady on boneless-skinless breasts, barely steady on wings and tenderloins, and about steady on the balance.

Daily National Grain Market Summary

St. Joseph, MO
Report Supplied By USDA

Weather continued to offer support to grain and soybean bids. More wet Weather is forecast for the eastern belt again. Soft red winter wheat areas are expected to receive more moisture. Talks of export delays in Argentina was supportive to soybean bids. Poor export interest continued to limit gains.

Wheat bids were supported by weather concerns as more wet weather is forecast for the eastern belt. Corn bids showed some strength Wheat 1 to 5 cents higher. Corn steady to 2 cents higher. Sorghum 1 cent higher. Soybeans 6 to 8 cents higher.

The Old Farmer's Almanac This Week With Almanac

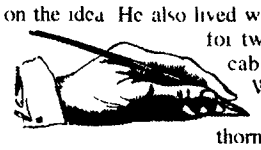
199 YEARS AGO

Ralph Waldo Emerson, born on May 25, 1803, began keeping a journal when he was just a teenager, later suggesting to Henry David Thoreau, at a Harvard lecture in 1837, that he do the same Thoreau took him up on the idea He also lived with Emerson and his family for two years before building a cabin in Emerson's woods at Walden Pond Writers Henry James and Nathaniel Hawthorne, poet Walt Whitman, naturalist John Muir, suffragist Margaret Fuller, and statesman Abraham Lincoln were other Emerson friends and acquaintances Originally a teacher and Unitarian minister, Emerson later embraced transcendentalism and, in his literary work, pressed for abolition, women's rights, and other freedoms



Finish each day and be done with it.

–Ralph Waldo Emerson American essayist and poet (1803–1882)

TIP OF THE WEEK

A blank notebook makes a fine gift for students, young writers, and others.

POOR-MAN'S PUDDING

For syrup:
1-1/2 cups brown sugar
1-1/2 cups water
3 tablespoons butter, melted
1/2 teaspoon vanilla extract
For dough:
3 tablespoons butter, softened
3/4 cup sugar
1-1/2 cups flour
2 teaspoons baking powder
pinch of salt
3/4 cup milk

Preheat oven to 350°F Make a syrup from the first four ingredients, bringing them to a boil Set aside For the dough, cream butter with sugar Sift flour, baking powder and salt into butter mixture, add milk Pour syrup into a 13x9-inch pan, then drop dough over the syrup Bake for 30 minutes

Makes 6 servings.

The Old Farmer's Weather Proverbs

May showers bring milk and meal.

The more thunder in May, the less in August and September.

Blossoms in May are not good, some say

What's In A Market Report?

EPHRATA (Lancaster Co.) — The USDA's Agricultural Marketing Service (AMS) collects and distributes price and sales reports on farm products to provide equal access to both buyers and sellers on current marketing information.

Uniform standards (such as quality grade and yield grade) on which to quote prices have been established for each commodity. The commodity's price basis — per-hundred weight, per-head, per-ton, per-bushel, etc. — should be noted in the report. Most livestock prices are reported on a per-hundred pound weight basis (CWT) with those on a per-head basis adequately noted. The weighted average is computed by dividing the total value of the sales by the total number of units sold.

For example: "Choice 2-3 steers, 1100-1400 lbs, sold 65-68.00" means the market reporter considered those steers of Choice quality, ranging from 1,100 to 1,400 pounds, with the estimated yield of closely trimmed retail cuts graded at 2-3 (on a scale of 1-5 yield grades) and at prices ranging 65 to 68 cents per-pound live weight.

The word "market" can refer to the geographic location where the commodity is traded or the price at which it is traded. Market reports may denote market activity, price trend, supply, demand and undertone. An explanation of these terms follows:

- MARKET ACTIVITY: The pace at which sales are made.
  Active - Supplies readily clearing the market.
  Moderate - Supplies clearing at a reasonable rate.
  Slow - Supplies are not clearing the market.
  Inactive - Sales are intermittent with few buyers or sellers.
- TREND: The direction in which prices are moving in relation to trading in the previous reporting period.
  Higher - Majority of sales are at prices measurably higher.
  Firm - Prices are higher, but not measurably so.
  Steady - Prices are unchanged.
  Weak - Prices are lower, but not measurably so.
  Lower - Prices for most sales are lower.
- SUPPLY: The quantity of the commodity currently available.
  Heavy - Volume of supply is above average.
- DEMAND: The desire to possess a commodity coupled with the willingness and ability to pay.
  Very Good - Offerings or supplies are rapidly absorbed.
  Good - Firm confidence on the part of buyers that general market conditions are good. Trading is more active than normal.
  Moderate - Average buyer interest and trading.
  Light - Demand is below average.
  Very Light - Few buyers are interested in trading.
- UNDERTONE: Sense of direction in a given market situation.

OPINION

Burgeoning Population And Smart Growth

Late last month the Lancaster County Planning Commission conducted a special conference about smart growth at Millersville University.

Several speakers had some alarming things to say about why we need smart growth. All communities need it.

What is smart growth?

In a nutshell, the concept embraces careful community planning. Houses shouldn't be developed on whatever land comes available, single units on what used to be the back-40, with no plans for the needs of a community. What about roads? What about parking, pedestrian right-of-ways, what about a sense of community and personality?

In essence, proponents of smart growth view their ideas as antidotes to sprawl. Putting land-use-planning concepts into place works wonders.

But common sense always dictates. While their plans are sound and good, common sense comes into play. Who is going to pay for this kind of thing?

Somebody has to. Geoffrey Anderson, an EPA official, noted what he calls the "voracious" land consumption just in Pittsburgh and Philadelphia alone. The population has remained the same or even declined, yet the land use area rose 30 percent over the same period of time.

Will Selman, senior planner with the Lancaster County Planning Commission, spoke about the smart growth initiative in Lancaster called "Envision." Envision itself embraces smart growth, which limits development impacts on ag lands and ensures the viability of the farm industry. But what smart growth also does, he said, is cut down on those "disconnected, cookie-cutter neighborhoods that aren't connected to the community."

Smart growth doesn't limit choices. It perpetuates choice in an intelligent way.

"We must do a better job of using our land," noted Mark Hackenburg, registered landscape architect and owner and vice president of RGS Associates in Brownstown. He pointed to several projects using successful smart growth strategies, including Brighton in East Hempfield, the Highlands of Warwick in Lititz, Newport Square in Lititz Borough, and the Eagleview Project in Downingtown.

Smart growth, which is simply smart planning, can be accomplished. With the growing population (one analyst noted there will be 60 million more people in America in 2020 than in the year 2000), we need it.

To Focus On Biosecurity On Poultry Farms

The avian influenza (A.I.) outbreak in Virginia continues to pose a threat to poultry operations in the region. As of this week, 151 farms had been quarantined and 143 farms were depopulated. Close to four million birds have been destroyed in the effort to control the disease. Six counties in Virginia and two in North Carolina have been affected.

Our regional poultry agent, Dr. Gregory Martin, offers the following specific steps we should be taking to prevent an outbreak in other areas of the Northeast.

The first step is to limit traffic on poultry farms. Only approved people should be cleared for entry to farms and farmers should keep a log of visitors. Farmers should severely limit or if possible eliminate contact with birds at other locations. Entry points to the poultry facilities should be secured using locks if necessary. Managers should ensure vermin controls are in place and maintained. All facilities need to be bird-proof. Workers should stay in poultry houses only as long as needed to carry out the task. Accessibility to the farm location should be limited using a gate away from the farm buildings.

Second, it is very important to maintain proper sanitation. Operations should use all-in, all-out flock movement whenever possible. Use and maintain footbaths at each facility. All visitors to poultry farms should use a full suit of protective disposable outerwear. All vehicles entering the facilities should be washed down with disinfectant. Mangers should make sure that equipment is cleaned and disinfected on a periodic basis. Use "downtime" as an opportunity to sanitize the housing units and make sure you are using the appropriate sanitizer compound for the conditions and material to be sanitized. All workers should shower and change to clean clothes after a visit to another poultry facility or a meeting prior to return to farm. As much as it is possible, eliminate visits to other poultry facilities. The final steps in good sanitation are to properly dispose of mortality and properly handle manure.

The third step in a vigilant biosecurity program is to maintain bird health surveillance. This includes vaccination for protection of known viral diseases in the area. Managers should post sample bird mortality for clinical signs and maintain a blood-sampling program for viral loads. At the onset of major disease symptoms, proper samples of birds and tissues should be sent to a nearby diagnostic laboratory.

Martin has posted much valuable information related to this and other aspects of poultry production at his Website at http://www.personal.psu.edu/gpm10/.

To Be Diligent About Farm Safety, Especially With Our Children

We are now in the busiest and most dangerous season on our farms. It is doubly important that we take time to practice farm safety when we are tempted to take shortcuts. This is especially true when our children are involved in our farm operations.

Dr. Dennis Murphy, professor of agricultural engineering at Penn State, recommends that farm families evaluate safety concerns for younger workers this spring. In 2000, 22 percent of farm-related fatalities in Pennsylvania affected youth age 19 or younger. Murphy noted, "On a farm, work, living and recreation areas overlap. Children as young as two years of age often are exposed to operating machinery."

Agriculture is the state's largest industry, with some 59,000 farms, of which about 90 percent are family-owned. "Labor often is supplied by children, a spouse, and perhaps older or temporary workers," said Murphy. "Farms are usually small operations that are not regulated by the Occupational Safety and Health Administration. The work often is done in a variety of conditions, ranging from extreme heat to extreme cold, in rain, sleet, snow or mud."

A survey taken in New York found that most families stopped operating their farm within five years of a fatal farm accident. "The aftermath of an accident can leave relatives devastated, both emotionally and financially," Murphy said. National Safety Council statistics show that tractor rollover, truck-related injuries, machinery entanglements, and drowning are the leading causes of death for agricultural workers under age 25.

Murphy said Penn State Cooperative Extension offers many programs to teach younger workers about farm safety. Many of Pennsylvania's 67 county cooperative extension offices hold farm safety camps on a regular basis. Other counties have instituted special programs aimed at younger workers, including a tractor driving safety course.

"Make sure tasks are appropriate for a younger person," Murphy said. "Pay particular attention to youths operating farm equipment, handling agricultural chemicals, and working with livestock." Murphy pointed out that younger farm workers also are at risk when taking part in rural leisure activities such as swimming or driving all-terrain vehicles.

Murphy cites preventative measures recommended by the National Safety Council for young farm workers. First, equip all tractors with a rollover protective structure and wear a seatbelt when operating tractors. Never carry riders on tractors or equipment and never ride as a passenger on a tractor or equipment. Maintain all farm vehicles and review the operating manual before operating any equipment.

Parents and young workers should attend training on safe and healthy work practices. Finally, stay out of farm ponds and other bodies of water unless they are posted as safe swimming areas. Always swim with at least one other person.

Quote Of The Week:

"Use power to help people. For we are given power not to advance our own purposes nor to make a great show in the world, nor a name. There is but one just use of power and it is to serve people."

Editor:

Recently, the U.S. Senate passed the 2002 Farm Bill, modified in a bicameral conference committee, by a vote of 64-35. While there are a few favorable things the bill does accomplish for farming in America, Pennsylvanians have little to be excited about in this legislation.

Before I explain my opposition to the Farm Bill, which sets agricultural priorities and policies for the next five years, let me highlight the portions of this legislation to which I do agree.

Farmland preservation, for example, is an issue of particular and longstanding interest to me. In 1996, working with Senators Boxer and Leahy, I was successful in securing a federal commitment to preserve and maintain production on valuable farmland. The culmination of that effort was the preservation of 108,000

TIME FOR A COURSE CORRECTION?

Background Scripture:
Galatians 5:1-15.
Devotional Reading:
1 John 2:7-17.

At first glance, it would appear to us that Paul's struggle with certain Christians over adherence to the Jewish law is, at best, interesting but not relevant to us today.

Apparently, when Paul established the churches of Galatia, he preached a gospel of salvation by grace through faith. In his absence, however, it seems that some people, either locals or outsiders, were able to convince them they must also live under the Jewish law, including circumcision. Today, neither circumcision nor the Jewish law are issues among Christians. So Paul has nothing to say on this to us, does he?

Yes, he does. Although most of us confess salvation by grace through faith, many of us live as though we are actually saved by works. For many, God is a celestial Scorekeeper keeping a debit and credit running account on each of us that will ultimately decide our residence for eternity. It is hard to give up the mentality of salvation by the plusses that outweigh the minuses. Our plusses will never add up to a saving score.

Our Add-Ons

Paul spells it out simply: "Now I, Paul, say to you that if you receive circumcision, Christ will be of no advantage to you" (5:2). This is possibly in response to some who have asked why they can't add being circumcised to their qualifications as Christians.

No, Paul, it's just a little something to add on. That's our problem, too: we're always "adding something on" to our discipleship — a ritual, a creed, a set of standards. There is nothing wrong per se with these add-ons, so long as they do not become legalistic means to winning God's favor.

The novelist Somerset Maughm recognized this same tendency in the discipline of creative writing: "It is the mark of an inexpert novelist to pose a powerful situation at the beginning of his story, and then to fail to realize, or at least examine, the inevitable implication." We begin our Christian lives well enough, but along the way we drift into something else and nothing is worse than thinking that what we have drifted into is where Christ leads us. Paul asks: "You were running well; who hindered you from obeying the truth?" (5:7). J.B. Phillips renders this as: "Who put you off course?" and Halford Luccock asks: "Why do we swerve from a brave beginning and go downhill?"

Those are questions which each of us must ask ourselves. Have I stayed on course? Has my discipleship begun to slide downhill?

Free To Serve

Paul gives us a guideline in making our self-assessments. "For you were called to freedom, brethren; only do not use your freedom as an opportunity for the flesh, but through love be servants of one another" (5:13).

In freeing us from the law, Jesus did not free us so we could be irresponsible and indifferent. Free of the crushing weight of a salvation we cannot earn or deserve, we are free to love our neighbors as ourselves — and not out of compulsion, but of eternal gratitude for God's grace. Salvation by works was an imposition laid upon us, and salvation by grace makes good works a thankful privilege.

Paul warns us that "For in Christ Jesus, neither circumcision nor uncircumcision is of any avail . . ." Just as circumcision does not help to save us, neither does the lack of it. It does not count either way. Neither does anything else that we do count toward giving us more salvation debits than credits.

I once knew a man who bitterly condemned Roman Catholic ritual, affirming that it could not save them. But, it seemed to me, he assumed that by not having ritual in his worship, he was earning spiritual Brownie-points.

Actually, this is not a difficult concept. Paul puts it in the plainest language: "For the whole law is fulfilled in one word, 'You shall love your neighbor as yourself.'" That's the direction in which you should be headed.

Agricultural Technology

Lancaster Farming has introduced a new department of interest to farmers, Agritech: Emerging Technologies in Agribusiness. The business news-related department focuses on technologies emerging with agri-industry, including new products and systems for production agriculture. See page C2.

Average Farm Feed Costs for Handy Reference

To help farmers across the state to have handy reference of commodity input costs in their feeding operations for DHIA record sheets or to develop livestock feed cost data, here's last week's average costs of various ingredients as compiled from regional reports across the state of Pennsylvania.

Remember, these are averages, so you will need to adjust your figures up or down according to your location and the quality of your crop.

National Feeder Cattle Weekly Summary

St. Joseph, Mo.
Report Supplied By USDA

NATIONAL FEEDER CATTLE SUMMARY for week ending May 10. Receipts: Total - 346,400, last week 281,700. Auctions - 229,000, last week 205,900. Direct - 98,000, last week 65,200. Video/Internet - 19,4000, last week 10,600. Old Format - 182,400, last week 133,200, last year 182,300. This week's auction volume included 48 percent over 600 lbs and 48 percent heifers.

Compared to last week, feeder cattle sold 1.00-3.00 higher in active trading. However; a much lighter test of stocker steers and heifers sold weak to 4.00 lower, especially in the deep South where receipts are predominantly lightweight calves. Orders for stocker cattle significantly slacked off this week as turn-out dates for most summer grazing areas have already passed. Although, recent rains and lower prices may cause producers who have the flexibility to crank up their stocking rates a bit. Demand for the heavier weight feeder cattle was very good again this week, despite large receipts. This was a welcome sight for those backgrounders who chose to wait and sell their wheat cattle coming off graze-out. Especially since the performance has been outstanding and weights on May wheat cattle have been heavier than normal. As good as the graze-out season has been, most of the Hard Red Winter Wheat has matured to the point of losing its grazing value. This will cause the few bunches still left on wheat to be moved very soon.

Direct feeder cattle trading was much more active this week than it has been for months, spurred by the fat cattle situation that finally broke out of its funk. Late last Friday, packers jumped out and gave 2.00 more for cattle at mostly 65.00. Immediate delivery was part of the transaction as trucks were practically backing up to the chutes as the deals were made. Buyers then turned around on Wednesday and paid an extra 3.00 to close this week's feedlot trade at mostly 68.00 live and mostly 110.00 dressed, which was 5.00-6.00 higher than the last significant trade. Most feedlots were finally able to clean up their show lists. This unexpected rally came as a result of a spark in dressed beef prices and movement. Hopefully, Mother's Day and Memorial Day grilling will gobble up all of this inventory. However, chain speeds are already slowing down and we may be looking at a post holiday hangover. But, few people were expecting this bright spot and analysts are calling for a friendly cattle-on-feed report next Friday.

Oklahoma Feeder Cattle Weekly

Oklahoma City, OK
Report Supplied By USDA

OKLAHOMA NATIONAL STOCKYARDS, Weekly Cattle Summary — Compared to last week: Feeder steers and heifers steady to 2.00 lower, exception noted over 1000 lb steers and 800 lb heifers 1.00-2.00 higher. Demand remains good for feeders and nearly as good as last week. Light supply of stocker cattle and calves steady to 3.00 higher with good demand. Second week of heavy supplies of feeder cattle off wheat with increased numbers of Brahma crosses. Some anxiety felt Monday as corn and soybean markets up sharply in reaction to plantings being a bit behind schedule. Receipts this week 15,625; last week 15,585; last year 14,791. Supply consisted of 94% yearlings over 600 lbs; 3% under 600 lbs; 3% cows and bulls. Heifers comprised 35% of feeder & calf supply.

East Fluid Milk And Cream Review

Madison, Wis.
May 15, 2002
Report Supplied by USDA

Spot prices of class II cream, dollars per lb. butterfat: F.O.B. producing plants: Northeast: 1.2667-1.3913 Delivered Equivalent: Atlanta: 1.2563-1.3809 mostly 1.2875-1.3083.

PRICES OF CONDENSED SKIM, dollars per lb. wet solids, F.O.B. producing plants: Northeast: Class II, includes monthly formula prices: .9200-1.0250; Class III - spot prices - .7500-.9600.

SPOT SHIPMENTS OF GRADE A MILK: FLORIDA: This week - In 0, Out 80; last week - In 0, Out 82; last year - In 0, Out 186. SOUTHEAST STATES: This week - In 0, Out 0; last week - In 0, Out 0; last year - In 0, Out 0.

Regional Milk Market Administrators announced the following, April 2002 uniform prices: Northeast $12.94, Mideast $11.92, Southeast $13.23, Florida $14.93, and Western New York (a state order) $12.46 at the base city or county in the orders. (For the Northeast, Mideast, and Western New York orders, statistical uniform prices are reported.)

Milk production in the East ranges from lower in the Deep South to slightly higher in the Northeast. The weather is more winter-like than spring-like in some of the far northern areas. Heavy rainfall and localized flooding has been reported in some areas of the Middle Atlantic and Mid-South. This did cause some power outages and transportation problems. Hot weather in Florida and other Gulf Coast states has caused the milk flow to decline from peak levels and milk volumes are in better balance. However, most Southeastern schools will be recessing during the next two weeks and manufacturers who got a slight break this week, feel that they will be back to capacity operating schedules very soon. Currently, a few Southern operations are down to just weekend milk, but they are ready for more when it is available.

In the Northeast, bottled milk sales are still slow and surplus milk volumes remain moderate to heavy. The strike continues and surplus milk volumes are heavy in the Middle Atlantic area. The strike is causing milk to "back up" into more plants that are helping the milk supplying plant as best they can. Some of the 'displaced" loads are moving at distressed prices.

Condensed skim sales are mixed, ranging from slow to fair. Class II prices are steady to lower as some suppliers are trying to move more wet solids than send them through dryers. Class III sales are steady at best and prices are unchanged, although more producers are trying to increase prices. Higher prices are meeting quite a bit of buyer resistance.

The fluid cream market is mostly steady, but suppliers report improved Class II demand this week. Despite the improved demand, heavy volumes continue to move to local and Midwestern butter manufacturers. Spot prices are often lower as the weekly CME butter average did move lower last week, despite the butter price moving higher since May 8. Multiples did creep a little higher this week as demand picked up. Ice cream production is seasonal, but cooler than normal weather is having an impact on consumption, particularly soft serve. Cream cheese and sour cream output is fairly steady. Bottled cream and aerosol whipping cream production is improved as strawberries are coming in season. Churning activity is steady at heavy levels.

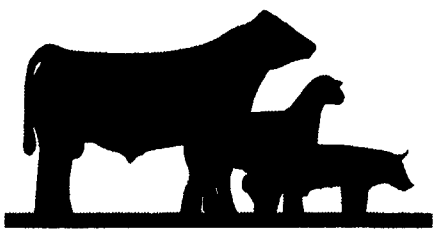
Livestock Evaluation Center



Livestock Stakeholders

One of my goals when I became Secretary of Agriculture was to build a new Livestock Evalution Center. And, I wanted the new PDA facility to be a leader in the nation. Good News! It is time for the Groundbreaking Ceremony!

Very Important. Due to the rainy weather we have been having, and due to the site work that is being contemplated, there will not be general parking at the Groundbreaking Ceremony. Persons wanting to attend the PDA ceremony on Friday, May 24,2002 should park and meet at the Special Events Building at the Ag Progress Days Site. Please be at the Special Events Building no later than 10:30 AM next Friday (May24). Group transportation will take you to the PDA Groundbreaking Ceremony. There will be return transportation. It is very important to follow this plan. There will not be general parking on the PDA construction site or along Route 45. Thank you for your helpful cooperation.

While the PA Department of Agriculture operates the Livestock Evaluation Center and its programs, we appreciate the professional association and friendship we share with Penn State and the livestock organizations. In addition to the test performances PDA conducts as a service to the livestock industry, the new Livestock Evaluation Center offers the opportunity for other research, student instruction, industry outreach, and professional collaboration. The new Livestock Evaluation Center will greatly enhance our opportunity to work together in pursuit of livestock excellence.

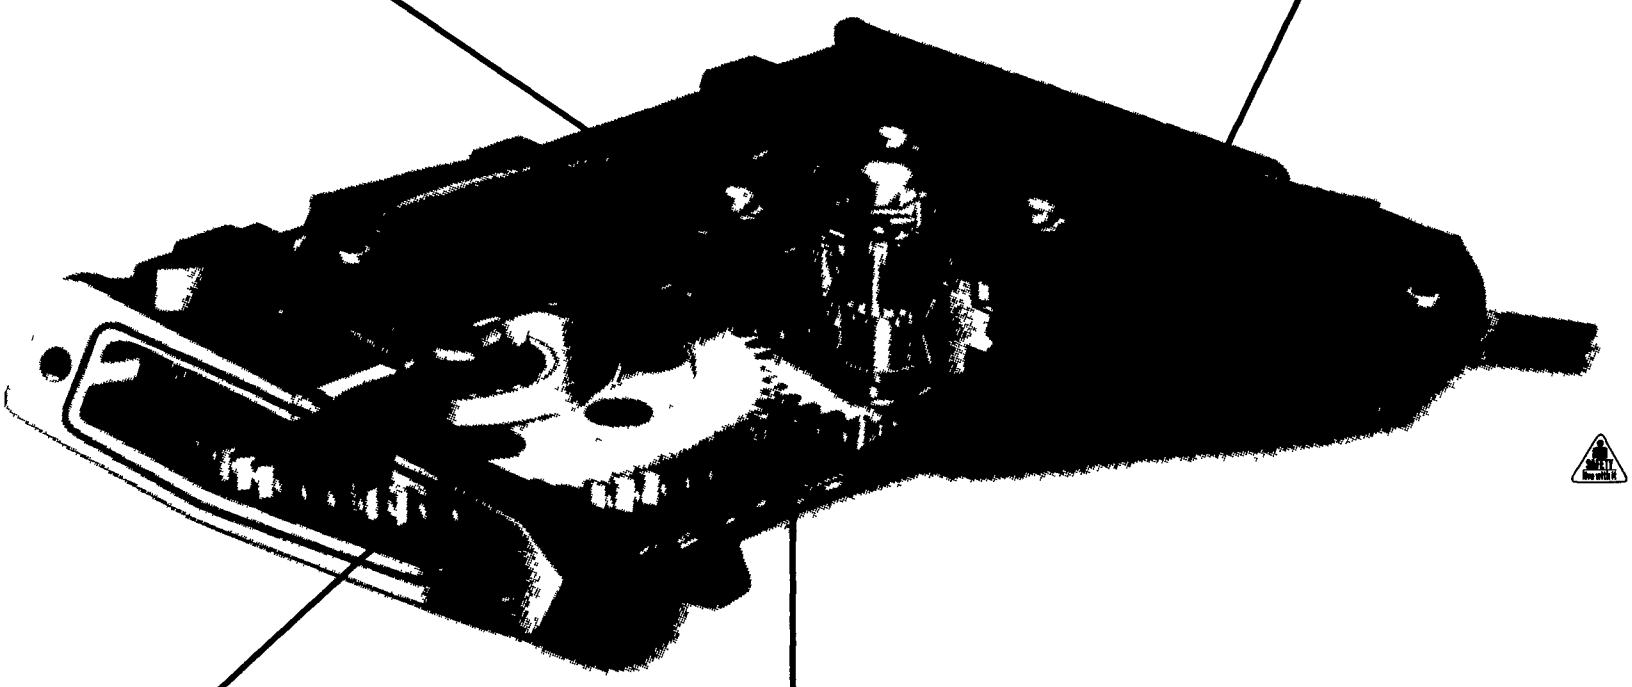
What makes John Deere Rotary MoCos better?

Shear Genius.

A smarter way to protect.
Each disk is protected with a patented shearhub for the best disk protection in the industry. Should you hit an obstruction, the splines shear, leaving the inner gears protected. Replacing a shearhub is far less costly and much easier than fixing internal components.

A smarter way to harvest hay.
Disks rotate toward the center of the cutting platform to lift the crop and cut cleaner And since knives usually rotate toward each other, streaking is dramatically reduced or eliminated All of the hay goes into the windrow



A smarter design.
Each diagonal-cut module can slide in and out without the cutterbar being removed. The common oil reservoir, with up to 11 quart capacity, delivers plenty of cooling lubrication Plus, the vented cutterbar design means less heat build-up, a big reliability advantage.

Brawn to go with the brains.
The low-profile design cuts closer and at a flatter angle And the cutterbar is made from high-strength nodular iron, making it stronger and more impact-resistant than grey iron This cutterbar has the strength to resist anything the field throws at it.

Smart choices in conditioning.
Get the conditioning you want with exclusive urethane roll or thorough impeller conditioning (steel rolls also available on 946 and 956 models) Your hay quality – and productivity – will soar.

John Deere has been making rotary MoCos for more than 20 years. The 6 Series MoCos are built with the same legendary quality and reliability found in all John Deere machines. So stop by your local John Deere dealership today and learn more about the smarter way to cut and condition hay. The genius in you will appreciate it.

acres of land across 19 states, including significant acreage in Pennsylvania.

In this year's bill, the conference committee recognized the value of the government's investment in prime farmland preservation and has increased funding toward this goal over the next six years. Additionally, Congress took a radical step toward market pricing by reforming the federal peanut program.

Moving away from Depression-era farm subsidies and quota systems, we are beginning to treat peanuts as we do other commodities under Farm Bill programming. I am pleased that we have made progress in our endeavor to stop the public crutching of commodity prices and artificial control over peanut supply. However, we have much more to accomplish if we are serious about ending the government's practice of micromanaging agricultural production across the U.S. Our continued subsidization of row crops in the nation's southern and midwestern states will have profound effects on the rest of America in the billions of dollars taxpayers will spend.

Agriculture is Pennsylvania's largest industry, providing for some 60,000 farming families within the state. Dairy is our number one agricultural sector. Our dairy farms house an average herd size of 140 cows and by any calculation, this illustrates the predominance of small to mid-size farms in our commonwealth. Our farmers do not run extensive agricultural operations, and while crops such as corn and soybeans are also staples in Pennsylvania, many of our crops do not qualify for or participate in government programs such as those covered by the Farm Bill. Our farmers will not be among the 10 percent of American farm owners who stand to receive 2/3 of the federal commodity funding that the Senate has just approved.

Pennsylvania's farmers, on the contrary, embody what we mean by life in the farm country of rural America. These are the family farms that will be buried by our subsidized overproduction. Federal commodity programs are not just disproportionately concentrated on big farming outfits, they are ultimately damaging to market prices. In the end, an already exorbitant bill for our taxpayers will become even more expensive, as prices continue to drop and drive more small farms out of business.

Congress will destroy the livelihood of these farming families and forever change the traditional culture of rural American life, and the taxpayers will be charged for all of it.

It is ironic that the final vote on this bill comes at a time when we are debating the President's authority to negotiate fast-track trade agreements in the interest of opening the world market. The Farm Bill's subsidy provisions undermine America's purported commitment to free trade by implementing the same kinds of agriculture programs we often criticize European countries for.

We are setting a terrible example for our trading partners and making an expensive mistake. The Senate has shown no sympathy for the small farmer, no leadership in opening free, fair markets, and complete disregard for American taxpayers. I will not, in good conscience, support legislation that is so clearly wrong for our nation and damaging to Pennsylvania.

— Sen. Rick Santorum

Delmarva's Chicken Industry Works To Prevent Avian Influenza

GEORGETOWN, Del. — Delmarva's chicken industry continues its intensified biosecurity program to prevent the introduction of avian influenza into the peninsula's more than 5,600 chicken houses.

Avian influenza, a major threat to chickens but not humans, has been causing devastating losses to the poultry industry in the Shenandoah Valley of Virginia.

In recent weeks more than 145 turkey and chicken farms have been quarantined in Virginia's Shenandoah Valley with the loss of more than three million birds. The virus has not been detected on Delmarva.

Delmarva's poultry industry has been on high alert for nearly two months and has taken many steps to limit traffic between the Shenandoah Valley and Delmarva, to increase bird health monitoring on Delmarva, and to impose tighter biosecurity standards.

Thanks to the donation of 800 pounds of Virkon® S disinfectant by DuPont Chemical Solutions Enterprise and Antec International, Delmarva's poultry industry has another tool to help prevent the introduction of the virus onto Delmarva. This donation will provide more than 25,000 gallons of disinfectant that can be used in chicken houses and on vehicles, equipment, and shoes.

"Preventing the virus from reaching Delmarva's chickens is the most effective biosecurity measure we can take," said Bill Satterfield, executive director of Delmarva Poultry Industry, Inc. (DPI), the trade association for the local chicken industry. "DuPont's donation of the highly effective Virkon® S disinfectant provides us another tool to keep Delmarva's chickens disease-free. We are grateful to DuPont for its interest and support."

DPI is encouraging everyone to do their part to help protect Delmarva's chickens. Tens of thousands of jobs and billions of dollars of economic activity are at risk from avian influenza.

President Signs Farm Bill, USDA Faces Distribution Chores

DAVE LEFEVER
Lancaster Farming Staff

WASHINGTON, D.C. — Now that the new farm bill is official, the nation's farmers are slated for a boost in conservation and price support funds.

While grain, cotton, and rice are the most heavily subsidized commodities, dairy farmers will also be eligible for payments during times of depressed fluid milk prices.

Farmland preservation funds were increased about 20-fold in the bill — "great news for farmland preservation in Pennsylvania," said Mary Bender, director of the Pennsylvania Bureau of Farmland Preservation.

President Bush signed the six-year legislation into law Monday, after it passed the U.S. Senate by a 64 to 35 vote and the House by 240 to 141 in prior weeks.

According to advocates of the new bill, price supports were boosted to reduce the need for providing emergency assistance to farmers, a common practice under the Freedom To Farm Act of 1996.

The bill has generated broad support from farmer organizations, including the American Farm Bureau Federation, the National Farmers Union, the National Corn Growers Association, the National Soybean Association, and Pennsylvania farm groups as well.

"This farm bill is the strongest yet in terms of conservation and benefits for the environment. The new farm bill puts in place a strong conservation program that includes incentives for farmers to improve resource conservation," said Joel Rotz, Pennsylvania Farm Bureau director of national legislative programs.

Others have expressed dissatisfaction with the new policies.

Kathy Lawrence, executive director of the National Campaign for Sustainable Agriculture, said the bill fails to address the needs of many of the nation's farmers.

"By promoting big industry over family farms and ranches, this bill spells trouble for agricultural communities, the environment, and consumers and we cannot support it," she said.

One initiative supported by Lawrence's group that remains in the final bill is the new Conservation Security Program, a measure that rewards farmers who practice environmental stewardship.

The new dairy program, which will provide direct payments to the nation's milk producers when the Class I price falls below $16.94 per hundredweight in the Northeast, has met mixed reviews.

While a majority of Pennsylvania's dairies produce less than the 2.4 million pounds of milk that are eligible for funds, some in the dairy field worry that the subsidies will result in flooded milk markets.

"On average, this will be a boon for dairy farmers, but it will have size-specific effects. If you believe anything about economics, you would have to believe that more money for producers will mean that more milk will be produced," said Mark Stephenson, economist at Cornell University.

That could mean dairies with more than 400-500 cows may lose more on lowered milk prices than they would gain from the subsidy payments, according to Stephenson.

Joined by government officials and the media, President Bush signs the new Farm Bill Monday morning.

Penn State dairy economist Ken Bailey said the effect of the program on milk supplies is difficult to predict.

"We will be getting more milk, but it's hard to say how much," he said.

The dairy program is in effect from December 1, 2001 through September 30, 2005. Dairy farmers will need to apply at their local Farm Service Agency (FSA) office in order to receive payments, Bailey said.

According to Rotz of the PFB, dairies with 70 cows averaging 18,000 pounds of milk can expect a $5,600 check this fall.

Rotz's projections indicate average herds could receive a total of about $8,800 for the year, and dairies producing up to the eligible limit could receive twice that amount.

While the PFB had supported dairy compact legislation that would have used money from the marketplace to sustain milk prices, Rotz said the Farm Bill provision will actually add up to more funds, especially for smaller farms.

With a large portion of the milk produced in Pennsylvania eligible for the subsidy, "the reality is that this program will pay more (than the compact would have)," he said.

Administered by the USDA through local FSA offices, the program will require an "incredible amount of work" to get the new regulations in place.

"There's no need (for dairy farmers) to watch the mailbox before this fall," Rotz said.

The new farmland preservation funds will be distributed to programs across the country. Both publicly administered and private, nonprofit farmland preservation groups will be eligible, according to Bender of the Pennsylvania Bureau of Farmland Preservation.

With $50 million allocated before October 1 of this year and $100 million for fiscal year 2003, the funding "shows how important farmland preservation has become nationally," she said. "We will be seeking our share here in Pennsylvania."

The Farm Bill also:

- Mandates an additional $17.1 billion for conservation incentives.
- Raises subsidies for grain and cotton.
- Revives subsidies for wool and honey.
- Allows meatpacking corporations to continue owning livestock, overturning a Senate proposal to ban packer ownership.
- Requires country-of-origin labeling for meat, fish, produce, and peanuts, starting in two years.
- Allows corn, soybean and small grain producers to update yield and base acreage figures.
- Requires importers of dairy products to pay 15 cents per hundredweight to the dairy checkoff program to fund milk promotion activities.
- Expands an adjusted gross revenue insurance program for specialty crop producers, now in effect in six eastern Pennsylvania counties.
- Allocates $405 million for bioenergy initiatives.
- Increases marketing loan rates.
- Provides new payments for peanuts, lentils, and dried peas.

USDA Seeks Nominees For National Dairy Board

WASHINGTON, D.C. — USDA is asking dairy producer and farm organizations to nominate candidates to serve on the National Dairy Promotion and Research Board. Nominations must be submitted by May 31.

The secretary of agriculture will appoint 12 individuals from those nominated to succeed members whose terms expire Oct. 31, 2002. The 12 new members will serve 3-year terms beginning Nov. 1, 2002, and ending Oct. 31, 2005.

Appointments will be made from nominations for the following: Region 2 (California); Region 3 (Arizona, Colorado, Idaho, Montana, Nevada, Utah, and Wyoming); Region 4 (Arkansas, Kansas, New Mexico, Oklahoma, and Texas); Region 5 (Minnesota, North Dakota, and South Dakota); Region 6 (Wisconsin); Region 7 (Illinois, Iowa, Missouri, and Nebraska); Region 8 (Alabama, Kentucky, Louisiana, Mississippi, and Tennessee); Region 9 (Indiana, Michigan, Ohio, and West Virginia); Region 11 (Delaware, Maryland, New Jersey, and Pennsylvania); Region 12 (New York) and Region 13 (Connecticut, Maine, Massachusetts, New Hampshire, Rhode Island, and Vermont).

For nominating forms and procedures, contact David R. Jamison, Chief, Promotion and Research Branch, Dairy Programs, AMS, USDA, Room 2958-S, Stop 0233, 1400 Independence Ave., SW, Washington, D.C. 20250-0233; telephone (202) 720-6909; fax (202) 720-0285; or e-mail at david.jamison2@usda.gov.

Agencies Announce Formation Of Wasting Disease Group

WASHINGTON, D.C. — USDA and the U.S. Department of the Interior (DOI) recently announced the formation of a joint working group on chronic wasting disease (CWD) to ensure a coordinated and cooperative federal approach to assisting the states with CWD response efforts.

"Working together with industry, states and other federal agencies is vital in further addressing this issue," Deputy Undersecretary of Agriculture Dr. Jim Butler said in testimony before a joint hearing of two House Resources Subcommittees. "In particular, working with the Department of the Interior will ensure the most efficient response to CWD by coordinating the efforts of both departments in the areas of research, surveillance and management."

CWD is a transmissible spongiform encephalopathy (TSE) of deer and elk. There is no evidence that CWD is linked to disease in humans, or in domestic animals other than deer and elk. The disease has been detected in wild deer and elk and in farmed elk herds. Wild deer and elk have been found with the disease in Colorado and Wyoming.

The first meeting of the joint working group on chronic wasting disease is scheduled for May 23.

Devon Horse Show, Country Fair Upcoming

DEVON (Chester Co.) — Pairs carriage racing, an exhibition Arabian Costume Class, and the Budweiser Clydesdale hitch will be featured during the Devon Horse Show and Country Fair.

The 10-day event begins May 23 and includes hunters, jumpers, three-and five-gaited saddle horses, hackney and fine harness horses and ponies, breeding classes, and coaching competitions.

This year exhibitions include Arabian Costume classes, Carriage Racing, and a Clydesdale hitch.

Carriage racing was first introduced to this country at Devon last year, when teams of four horses competed. The competition had been conducted previously in Canada at the Royal Winter Fair in Toronto.

The event is returning by popular demand this year with the small difference that it is pairs instead of fours competing.

This year, four drivers: Larry Poulin, Maine; David Saunders and Mark Schofield, natives of Great Britain; and Jack Weaver of Charleston, W. Va., will drive the pairs.

Carriage Racing is patterned after Combined Driving, with a course of obstacles set up in the Dixon Oval that the drives must work their way through. The competitor completing the course in the fastest time is the winner.

Carriage racing will be conducted Friday and Saturday evenings, May 24 and 25, and Sunday afternoon.

Arabian horses ridden by contestants in native costume will perform in exhibition classes Sunday and Monday evenings, May 26 and 27.

Bridles may consist of bit, hackamore or other suitable headstall. Attire will consist of native, or Bedouin, type costume, including flowing cape or coat, pantaloons, head dress, scar, or sash.

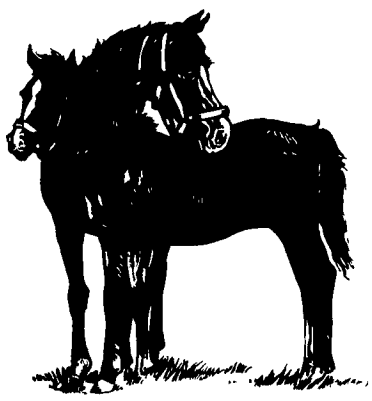
The Clydesdales perform nightly from Wednesday, May 29 through the closing of Saturday, June 1. The horses will be stabled at the show grounds, and spectators are welcome to visit these gentle giants.

The Devon Horse Show and Country Fair benefits the Bryn Mawr Hospital, to which it has donated over $10 million over the past eight decades.

The Country Fair is open daily from 10 am. to 11 p.m. except Sunday, when it opens at 11 a.m.

Sporting clothes, artwork, and leather goods are dotted throughout the fair area. Also featured at the fair are games, rides, and food.

General admission is $6 for adults, $3 for children under 12 and $4 for seniors over 65. Reserved seating is available. Call for ticket prices. The ticket office is open Monday, Wednesday, and Friday 10 a.m. to 3 p.m. Tickets may be purchased in advance at the ticket office at the show grounds, or call (610) 688-2554.



N.Y. Sustainable Workshop Scheduled

WARNERVILLE, N.Y. — Jim and Adele Hayes will conduct their fourth annual workshop on sustainable livestock management at their 200-acre diversified operation, Sap Bush Hollow Farm, in Warnerville, near Cobleskill.

The workshop, set for Saturday and Sunday, June 1 and 2, is called Building Profit through Greener Pastures. Topics to be covered include market development and sales techniques, grazing strategies, fencing, water systems, livestock selection and procurement, animal diversity and nutrition, stress issues, predator control, developing observational skills, and holistic decision making. For seminar fees, preregistration, brochure, or other information, contact the Regional Farm & Food Project at (518) 427-6537 or e-mail: farmfood @capital.net.

The Regional Farm & Food Project (RFFP) is an Albany-based organization of farmers and consumers. Serving a 10-county area, RFFP fosters new opportunities for family-scale farms through education and new connections between farmers and communities. RFFP's website is http://www.capital.net/~farmfood/.

Small-Scale Food Processors Conference Conducted In Geneva

GENEVA, N.Y. — "Making the Cash Register Ring" was the draw for the 70 small-scale food processors who attended the Third Annual Small-Scale Food Processing Conference, at the New York State Agricultural Experiment Station, in February.

"The small-scale food processors do a terrific job of bringing value-added products to market and helping New York farmers get more money for their raw products," said Dave Evans, president of the Small-Scale Food Processors Association (SSFPA). "They enhance the agricultural economic base of New York. The Food Venture Center at Geneva is a big asset for these producers."

The conference was sponsored by the SSFPA and the Northeast Center for Food Entrepreneurship (NECFE), which is based at the Experiment Station. It was preceded by the Entrepreneur Food Expo and dinner in downtown Geneva.Assemblyman Bill Magee (D-111th), chair of the New York State Assembly's Agriculture Committee, addressed audience concerns regarding distribution networks in New York City, right-to-farm laws, and the need to establish additional USDA-approved kitchens across the state. Magee considered the conference a wonderful opportunity to talk to people who are in the small-scale food processing business. "I see a lot of growth in the value-added sector of the economy," he said.

The conference was broken into five sessions. The first session, "Financing Your Business" focused on options to finance small businesses. The entrepreneurs in attendance received information on grants, loans and other creative financing opportunities available to small-scale processors. The second session was "Connecting Markets to Products." The session started out as a panel discussion and then broke into one-on-one discussions with market owners and distributors from around the state who have an interest in New York products. The third session was titled "Incubator Kitchens: Can They Work For You?" This session explored what existing kitchens offer and presented information on what the "Incubator Kitchen Bill" means for farmers and processors. The fourth session concentrated on "Regional Chapter Development." Because each region has unique strengths and needs, processors broke up into groups by region to brainstorm about what they could do to improve their businesses.

How to Place Phosphorus For Sugarbeets

NORCROSS, Ga. — Phosphorus is an important nutrient for sugarbeets. Applied when needed, phosphorus can significantly increase yields, leading to higher sucrose production per acre. But how should the phosphorus be placed to achieve maximum production? Consider the phosphorus needs of the plant and the structure of the sugarbeet root system.

Phosphorus uptake is greatest in the early spring. Uptake by sugarbeet tops and roots is greatest early in the season. The concentration of phosphorus in both plant fractions decreases as the season progresses. Tops have much higher concentrations than the roots. This means that actively growing tops place a demand on the roots to provide phosphorus. Given this pattern, adequate supplies of phosphorus early in the season appear critical for helping the sugarbeet plant reach its attainable yield potential.

Adequate nutrition depends on roots finding soil phosphorus supplies. Phosphorus is taken up from the soil by the sugarbeet root system. For a sugarbeet plant to be sufficiently fed with phosphorus, two conditions must be present: 1) enough phosphorus must be in the soil, and 2) soil phosphorus must be close to growing roots to be available for uptake. Phosphorus moves very little in most soils. The highest concentration tends to be within inches of where it was originally placed. The trick then is to place phosphorus where the plant roots can get to it at the time when the plant needs it. For sugarbeets, that demand appears to be greatest early in the growing season.

The sugarbeet root system does not produce many fibrous roots until later in the season. For the first couple of months after planting, the taproot dominates the root system. Short laterals form from the taproot, but do not extend very far. After two months, the fibrous root system begins proliferating in the upper foot and a half of soil. Under irrigated conditions, root branching can be fairly extensive close to the soil surface. Approximately three months after planting, root proliferation shifts from the upper to the lower soil profile. During this period, fibrous root growth occurs primarily below a depth of about 18 inches and continues to maturity.

Early phosphorus uptake relies on proper placement. Placing phosphorus with or directly below the seed puts phosphorus near the actively growing taproot early in the season. Placement to the side means the crop must rely on lateral root growth early in the season, which does not appear to occur significantly until two or more months after planting. Recent studies from the Red River Valley in Minnesota have shown that maximum yield response to phosphorus can occur from low rates placed with the seed at planting.

Phosphorus uptake later in the season may depend on soil phosphorus reserves. Research has shown that the fertility level determines to some degree the probability that sugarbeets will respond to additional phosphorus inputs. Responses to broadcast applications in the Red River Valley have not been as consistent as those from placement with or below the seed. Given the growth of the root system, overall phosphorus supplies at various depths may be important for determining the probability of response to broadcast additions. Such relationships have not been well studied. Research for other crops such as barley and wheat has shown that while annual responses are greater at lower soil test phosphorus levels, the highest yields are attained on soils with adequate supplies. The importance of soil fertility levels for attaining higher yields has yet to be fully explored for sugarbeets.

Soil fertility management needs to consider other crops in the rotation. Placing small amounts of phosphorus with or below the seed may be the best approach for early season phosphorus requirements of sugarbeets. However, rotational crops, such as wheat and corn, require a combination of phosphorus placement with the seed and adequate soil fertility levels to realize their yield potential.

the least amount of moisture exhibited the best BTU (heat) values of the three choices.

Compared to coal, poultry litter has less than half the BTU value of one pound of coal, said Carr. However burning the litter, even though it may not be as cost effective, does create electricity and consumes the litter.

The three combustion technologies under development and in use in the Delmarva area are the stoker, gasification, and fluidized bed options.

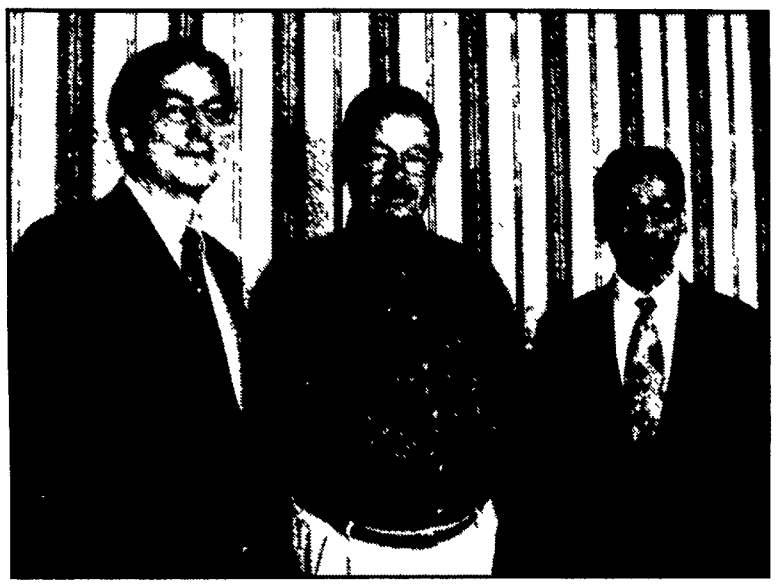
Another option, separating and capturing the gas from the litter in a water slurry, may not be economically viable.

Activities in the Eastern Shore region include several energy conversion plants using litter to generate electricity as the material is converted to steam to turn turbines.

In addition, a pelletizing plant uses 100,000 tons of litter per year. The free-flowing, sterilized pellets can be then shipped via train to the Midwest, which needs the phosphorus and uses the pellets as fertilizer.

Composting, also a recycling alternative, utilizes 10,000 tons of litter per year. Microbes, the "workhorses of the system," mean that the half-and-half mixture of poultry litter and yard waste must be kept moist. Since the litter is so fine, moisture does not easily penetrate the entire area, so it is manually blended. The mixture must be oxidized to keep odor levels at a minimum.

"With time, we can come out with stabilized organic residue," said Carr. "It's the only way you can deodorize the material without a lot of cost."



From left stands Dr. Bob Elkin, department head, Penn State Poultry Science department; Dr. Lewis Carr, extension biological resources engineer for the University of Maryland; and Dr. Ramesh Ramachandran, recent addition to the poultry team, an assistant professor at Penn State in the department of Poultry Science.

Heat is also a necessary component, because the blend must reach more than 150 degrees. "If the material is put together correctly, we can achieve those levels with no problem," he said.

In the process, "total phosphorus increases in this process, but soluble phosphorus decreases from 12 to 4 percent," Carr said. Also, nitrogen decreases slightly with the aeration process.

Red And White Dairy Cattle Association Announces Annual Convention Details

CRYSTAL SPRING (Fulton Co.) — The Red and White Dairy Cattle Association (RWDCA) announces their 2002 annual convention schedule, July 29-31, in Belvidere, Ill.

The association's annual convention will be hosted by the newly formed Midwest RWDCA. Convention plans and a preliminary schedule of events are as follows:

• Monday, July 29: National board meeting; tours Golden Oaks, Sunset Acres, and/or other area sights; and pizza party for all members and guests.

• Tuesday, July 30: Red and White for Blue in 2002 Show (Brian Behnke judging), annual membership meeting; and awards banquet and craft auction.

• Wednesday, July 31: Pancake breakfast and Land of Lincoln National Convention Sale.

Opportunities for elite genetics will be strong, as the Belvidere Land of Lincoln International Sale offers leading genetics predicted to be the best in the history of the breed. Early commitments to this sale include daughters and/or descendants of Renita Ranger, Logic Sammy, Jubilant Annie, Ranger Riley, Nittany Nillie, Blackrose, Ned Dixie, Leadman Niki, Linday Scarlette, Maud, Cherry Rae and many other breed-leading families. The sale will feature show cows and heifers, index leaders and productive pedigrees. Additional consignments will be announced shortly.

The Midwest RWDCA promises a special event with all the Midwestern traditions. The committee encourages participants to plan early to attend the convention, so we can spend "Three Days In the Land of Lincoln." Three Days in the Land of Lincoln will be a celebration for all Red and White enthusiasts, at the Boone County Fairgrounds, in Belvidere, Ill. The Clock Tower Resort will serve as the convention and sale headquarters. For more information and advanced registration for the convention, breeders should contact the convention chairperson team of Brian and Sue Crull, (815) 765-3673.

Senate Passes Energy Bill With Renewable Fuel Standard

WASHINGTON, D.C. — The U.S. Senate recently passed an energy bill by a vote of 88 to 11.

The comprehensive energy legislation includes the renewable fuels standard (RFS), which would triple U.S. usage of biofuels such as ethanol and biodiesel by 2012. Other provisions require the federal government to use ethanol and biodiesel in its transportation fleets when possible and to provide tax credits for renewable fuel production.

"The benefits of biofuels like ethanol and biodiesel are far-reaching," said National Farmers Union President Dave Frederickson. "Expanded use of these products will result in a cleaner environment, less dependence on foreign oil supplies, expanded commercial demand for U.S. farm commodities, and new economic opportunities for farmers and rural communities."

Pa. Farmers Union Urges House To Reject SB 1413

BLOOMSBURG (Columbia Co.) — Pennsylvania Farmers Union is urging the Pennsylvania House of Representatives to reject Senate Bill 1413, citing its negative impact on the state's family farms and rural communities. The family farm organization maintains the legislation would mean a loss of the right to plan and prepare for the future safety and well-being of Pennsylvania's rural communities.

"SB 1413 has serious flaws in its language that need to be addressed before Pennsylvania Farmers Union can support it," said PFU President Larry Breech. "The enormous liability and restrictions that this legislation places on the municipalities and their residents creates an unfair and unjust situation that is not acceptable.

"Pennsylvania Farmers Union recognizes that there are issues that need to be addressed to provide the needed direction and guidance for improvement in the opportunities for production agriculture to grow and prosper Breech said. "The proposed legislation does not address these needs, therefore, we strongly urge the members of the House to reject SB 1413 in its current form."

Clean, fresh, quality drinking water on your farm could make a bigger difference than you think.

UNDERSTANDING HEAT STRESS IN DAIRY CATTLE

Extension Dairy
Agent, Lancaster

Think of cows as furnaces. The more you stoke them (feed them), the more heat they produce. As we strive to maximize dry matter intake (DMI) and milk output, we sure do stoke our high-producing cows!

The most comfortable range for lactating cows is around 41 to 77 degrees Fahrenheit, and that will vary with humidity. When humidity levels are less than 30 percent, cows can become moderately stressed at temperatures of about 90 degrees Fahrenheit. But when humidity levels increase to 80 percent or more, moderate stress can occur at temperatures of 75-80 degrees.

Roughly, this is when the temperature-humidity index is in the 80s. Severe stress can occur when this index gets into the 90s that's when temperatures rise to about 95 degrees or higher and humidity levels reach 80 percent or more. The problem magnifies when temperatures remain high at night and cows don't have a chance to cool down. If it gets bad enough, heat stress can become life-threatening to cows.

What contributes to increased body temperatures? Digestion (stoking the cow's rumen with feed, especially with hard-to-digest fibrous feeds) and other normal metabolic functions performed by the cow's body, cow activity, increased humidity, and still air, which reduce the ability of cows to evaporate moisture and dissipate heat from their body, high air temperatures, solar radiation, and dark colors (dark-colored cows absorb about twice as much heat as light-colored ones).

How does heat stress affect cows? High-producing cows are more sensitive to heat stress than low-producing and non-lactating cows. The first thing you may notice is a drop in feed intake, perhaps as much as 33 percent or more, which then translates into a similar drop in milk production. But heat stress also reduces the DMI of transition cows (that includes springing heifers), and that's the last thing you want to have happen to cows prior to and after calving!

Heat stress in the last trimester of pregnancy contributes to lighter birthweights, reduced vigor in newborn calves, increased calving difficulties — and all of its related problems — plus a significant loss of milk production in the upcoming lactation. It can also lower cows' immune response, thereby reducing their ability to fight off mastitis and other infections.

Heat stress increases cow respiration rates and panting, and that increases their nutrient needs. At 95 degrees, cows' nutrient requirements may be 15-20 percent greater than they were at 70 degrees. You can imagine what will happen to bulk tank weights when DMI becomes depressed at a time when cows' nutrient needs become greater. In fact, you probably don't have to guess because, chances are, you probably have already experienced these production declines in times past!

Cows also lose more body fluids because of increased sweating, slobbering, and urination. With these fluid losses, water intakes may increase by about 33 percent. Potassium losses increase with sweating and sodium losses increase with urination. Feed passage rates and gut motility slow down, which, in turn, reduces feed intake. The rumen may become more acid, and fat tests can be depressed.

Body temperatures increase, as indicated by rectal temperatures. Bloodflow to the skin is increased in an effort to help dissipate excess body heat. This reduces the flow of blood to internal organs, decreasing the absorption and transport of feed nutrients, thus reducing milk secretion. Excess body heat can damage the ovum, the embryo, and sperm. High uterine temperatures can interfere with implantation of the embryo and trigger early embryonic death (repeat breeders). Cows that lose a lot of flesh and are in negative energy balance, because of reduced DMI, may become anestrus and fail to conceive. Once a severe heat spell ends, it may take several weeks for cows and bulls to recover and produce normal eggs and sperm.

Heat-stressed cows are more lethargic. They don't feel like walking to the feed bunk or to the watering trough. They may "give up" earlier in times of calving difficulties and may show less interest in displaying heats. They will seek out breezes and places of shade and cool, wet (sometimes sloppy) places to rest.

Listen to what your cows are telling you by the actions they display. In an upcoming article, I will be discussing some ideas for reducing the impact of heat stress on cows.

Gibbons Helps Growers, Wins IPM Award

GENEVA, N.Y. — Ants, onions, and lightning help to make work interesting for John Gibbons, program assistant for Cornell Cooperative Extension of Ontario County. They're also part of the reason that Gibbons received an "Excellence in IPM Award" from the New York State Integrated Pest Management (IPM) Program at the New York State Vegetable Conference in Liverpool, N.Y.

Gibbons is the only recipient of an IPM award known to wear at least five distinct hats within the cooperative extension system. He's part of a four-county vegetable program, helping growers manage crops and pests plus contributing to a newsletter known as the Weekly Vegetable Update. Once a week, Gibbons troubleshoots computer systems for extension associations in two counties.

As part of the NYS IPM Program, Gibbons checks sweet-corn traps to determine when insect pests are arriving and how long they're staying. He also scouts IPM vegetable demonstration plots, looking for insects, diseases, and other problems.

In addition to these jobs, Gibbons spends a large portion of his time in Geneva at the New York State Agricultural Experiment Station, masterminding the inner workings of the Northeast Weather Association's Website. Known as NEWA, this Internet-based system benefits subscribers by providing local forecasts, disease predictions, and pest information for onions, cabbage, potatoes, tomatoes, grapes, apples, and field crops.

JUNE IS DAIRY MONTH!

Lancaster Farming plans its annual festive June Dairy Month issue June 1. The issue will be packed with dairy farm features from around the region. Also scheduled will be dairy recipes and columns of interest to the dairy producer.

Planting is done between Aug. 15 and Sept. 10 with a water-wheel planter. The model the Sauders use is made locally.

Strips of black plastic mulch are placed on six-foot centers. The Sauders plant a double row of plants per strip. Plants are spaced 12-inches between rows and 12-inches apart in a zigzag pattern.

Rows planted north to south will produce higher yields than rows planted east to west, because sunlight reaches the plants better.

After planting it is very important to keep moisture levels high to enable the plugs to become firmly established. To encourage growth, some nitrogen is added to the water through a dripline system.

Removal of runners cause a single crown of the plant to become a multi-crown plant. Sauder said that one plug can produce as many as 10 mini crowns, which causes an increase in production. According to Sauder, the Chandler variety produces two to three more berries of a larger size than more common Eastern varieties.

Hail, slugs, and insects are some of the hazards of berry growing. Hail can do funny things to berries. Depending how and when hail hits berries, the damage is different. One year the berries were odd-shaped when the hail hit the sides of the maturing berries. The nick healed over to cause a lopsided berry. Sometimes, however, hail causes nicked berries to rot.

Rainy weather often brings an abundance of slugs. Bait is placed in the walkways to control them.

"We are at the mercy of the weather," Grace said of the berries. "One year it rained so much, we hardly had time to pick one box between the rainfall."

As many as nine local people help pick berries during peak season to fill orders, but most is done by pick-your-own customers. That keeps Grace busy directing pickers in the patch, providing trays, and determining charges.

Some days, Grace is so busy in the berry patch, she doesn't have time to eat. Despite the long hours, Grace said this is her favorite time of the year. "I love meeting people and the selling part," she said.

In addition to pick-your-own, the Sauders also provide berries to some local grocery stores. Occasionally they have a few to send to the auction.

The Sauders attend produce conferences during off-season hours, but said much of their expertise comes through trial and error.

Even the best-laid plans often go awry. Last year, the Sauders had been promised 22,000 plugs of the Earliglow variety. A week before planting time, the company said they did not have any of the promised variety. So the Sauders made a quick transition to planting Chandler, Sweet Charlie, and Avonlon varieties.

Earliglow are most in demand but do not do well under plastic, Grace said. Chandler, her favorite variety, does best in plastic.

When the couple moved on his family farm, they first had a beef operation and later added a dairy herd.

Grace was from a produce farm in nearby Denver. It seemed natural to grow some extra berries, beans, peas, and other garden crops and sell from the roadside.

Grace said, "We started under the apple tree with a table and scale." The Sauders live in a very rural area with fields in front of their home, but it didn't take long for business to pick up through word-of-mouth advertising.

The dairy herd has been phased out, but beef cattle are still raised on some of the acreage. In addition to berries, the Sauders grow asparagus and rhubarb. They pick asparagus every day from April 27-June 21 to sell to local stores and to roadside customers.

Only one of the Sauders' eight children still lives at home. They have 20 grandchildren under the age of 14 years.

Daughter Sarah, 20, has a full-time off-farm job but continues to help in the berry patch and with other produce.

Work doesn't end when the berries stop growing. After the season, the berry leaves are mowed off.

For the Sauders, it will be bean shelling season. They custom shell peas, beans, and soybeans for customers who bring baskets of produce to their farm.

After September, the workload eases for Grace and her daughter. That's when "We dig out the sewing machine and quilt," Sarah said.

Although the outdoor workload ends for the women, Harvey's continues throughout the fall. He has a full-time job at Tyson Foods and manages the farm operation on the side.

In November, a floating row cover is put over top of the plants. The cover is anchored with sandbags weighting about 20 pounds and spaced 5-6 feet apart. The cover is left on all winter and removed when the first flower is spotted in the spring. This enables the bees to pollinate the plants.

A close watch is kept on the weather. If a frosty morning is forecasted, the cover is placed back on the field.

On April 24, heavy frost with temperatures dipping to 25 degrees resulted in almost 90 percent loss of the first batch of berries.

The cover enables the berries to mature at least a week earlier. Some rows are left uncovered, which allows an extra week of harvest.

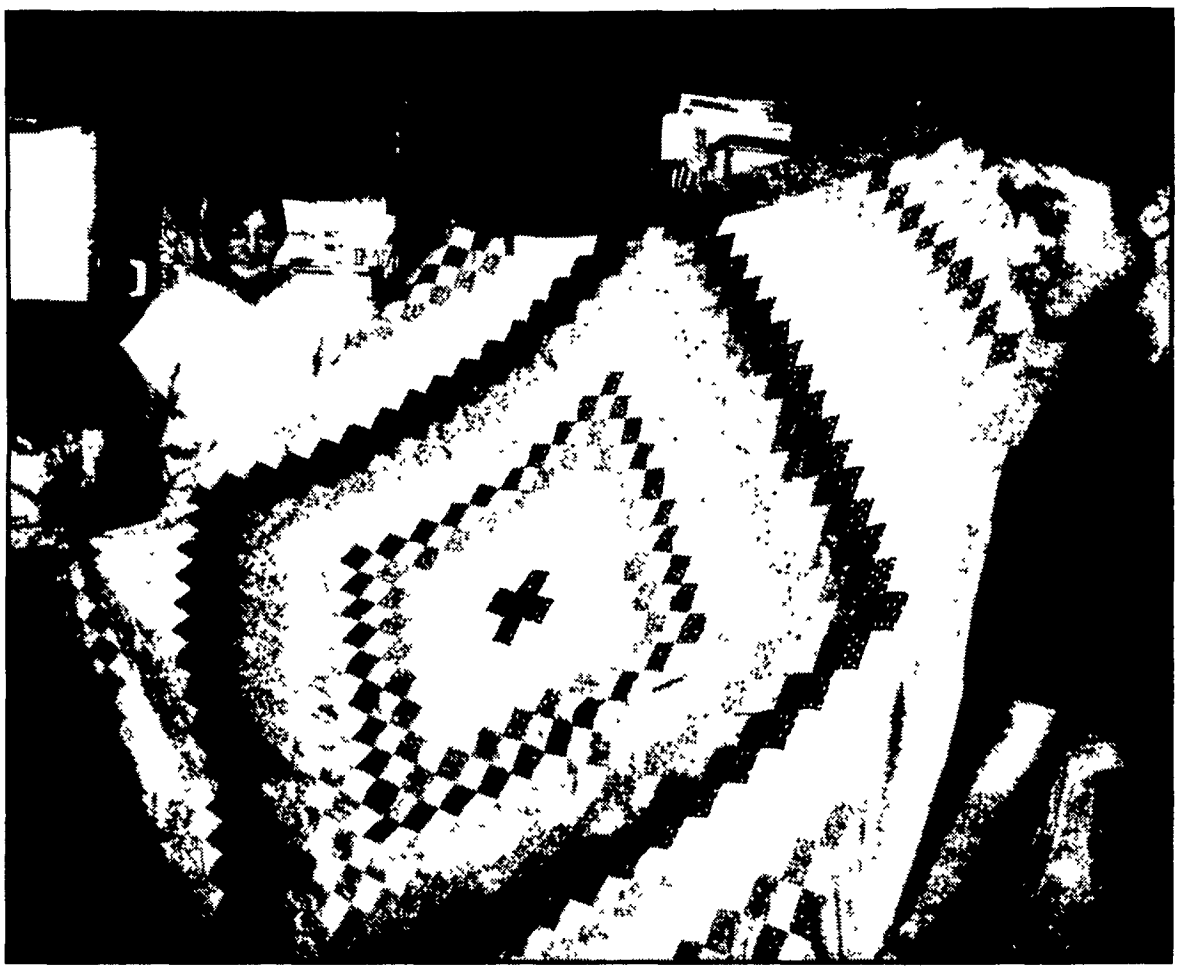
At the first greening of plants, a fertigation program is begun and used through early harvest. Through drip irrigation, the Sauders apply calcium nitrate and a 20-20-20 soluble solution as needed.

Plants are tested weekly to determine nitrogen levels in plants and the fertilization adjusted accordingly.

The Sauders utilized Penn State Extension services to determine the recommended amount of insecticides and fungicides to apply. Herbicides are applied with a shielded sprayer and used only in the alleys.

The Sauders have been growing berries for 24 years. Price varies throughout each berry season depending on size and supply.

For more information about berries, call the Sauders, 1031 Valley View Rd., New Holland, at (717) 445-6456.



When the growing season is over, Grace and Sarah dig out the sewing machine to make quilt tops such as this one in a "Trip Around the World" pattern.

Sarah, 20, helps with berry picking in addition to a full-time off-farm job.

by selling directly at urban markets or wholesaling to others who sell produce in the city.

Weather will present the biggest risks to growers, especially with groundwater levels running low during a time of their year when they are generally highest.

"We're heading into a high-use period with weak reserves," Ressler said.

While recent rains have provided "a little drought relief," groundwater levels are still much lower than they should be for this time of the year, he said.

The situation is especially risky for growers who depend on well-water for irrigating summer crops, Ressler pointed out. To reduce the risk, growers should use techniques that help conserve water, such as trickle irrigation along with mulches to hold moisture in crop beds.

Ultimately, the crops depend on rainfall replenishing the water supply.

"A couple days of soaking rain this summer would be a big help," Ressler said.

Water supplies and milk markets are major concerns for Robert Grove, dairyman from Antrim-Way Farm near Greencastle, Franklin County.

Grove partners with his son, Keith, to farm about 350 acres of corn, soybeans, and forages for their Holstein herd that includes 95 milking cows. Robert and his wife, Norma, have been dairying in Franklin County since 1960.

Last fall, the Groves had two new wells drilled on their 185-acre home property to supplement an older, faltering well. The water supplied by the new wells, however, is less than the Groves had hoped. They alternate between sources to keep water coming.

"We play tag with the wells," Robert said.

Drought conditions are not the only factor the Groves see threatening their water supply. According to Robert, a nearby industry draws high volumes of water from the same underground stream the Groves depend on for the dairy.

Robert, a Dairy Farmers of America regional council member, is also concerned about a trend toward less consumption of beverage milk and weaker markets. While the recently-passed Farm Bill promises aid to dairy farmers, he worries that the new subsidies will cause overproduction of milk and drive prices down even more. He would have preferred a dairy compact to boost milk prices with money from the marketplace rather than from taxpayers.

"We're in a supply and demand market," he said. "We would have been better off with compacts."

As compensation for low milk prices during the past six months, the new dairy program will deliver a payment of about $5,600 later this year to farms with 70 cows producing an average of 18,000 pounds of milk — the average Pennsylvania herd, according to Pennsylvania Farm Bureau policy specialist Joel Rotz. He projected payments for the average herd could total about $8,800 for the year, with larger herds potentially receiving twice that amount.

In spite of the uncertainties, Robert Grove is hopeful of passing on a thriving dairy operation to Keith and his family. The Groves dodged rain showers and storms to plant their corn crop early in the month. Goals for the dairy include growing more soybeans for the cow rations and increasing the 22,000 pound rolling herd average.

"You always hope," Grove said.

Grazier, Orchard Grower Provide Views

Stoltzfoos, "we're significantly ahead of last year this year already. Last year the first cutting of hay was probably down 20-30 percent from the year before."

However this year hay production has bounced back that 20-30 percent and even perhaps exceeded that percentage, said Stoltzfoos.

Even though rainfall does play a large role in the success of a season, having an animal operation and a diversified farm keeps Stoltzfoos from becoming totally dependent on the weather.

"Grass is very dependent on regular moisture." he said. However "an animal operation is much more insulated from weather because we're not only making money on what grows, we're adding it into a value-added product.

"If I just had just the crop to sell — grass — I would be dependent on two things: enough rain to have a crop and enough dry weather to make and sell it at high quality."

However a grazing operation, said Stoltzfoos, can keep its quality up even in a dry year, and a producer can buy additional hay to keep production fairly constant.

"In other words, you're not carrying all your eggs in one basket," he said.

Another factor which helps keep Stoltzfoos in business is that he does not have to hire additional labor. "It's a family operation. That's another thing that helps me to stay positive about it. We can pull in our belt and keep moving."

Even with last year's drought, "most feeds are very reasonable to low, and have been," he said. This year Stoltzfoos also contracted some hay on ahead and plans to buy more, as he has expanded by 30 cows over last season.

As for the timing of this year's spring, "grazing season was about right on or 4-5 days later. We normally start grazing around March 20, and this year there wasn't much there worth talking about untill March 25," he said.

Brown's Orchards

Brown's Orchards and Farm Market, Loganville, is gearing up for another fruit season.

Even though this spring's rains may continue, Brown has anticipated a dry year and worked accordingly. "We had such a dry winter — even going into late winter it was still really dry," said Scott Brown, orchard manager for the family-owned business.

To be ready for the possibility of a drought, "we trimmed the trees a little bit harder," he said.

"We don't want too excessive a load in the event that it would pan it to be a very dry year, although I think things are looking up a little bit with the rains we have had," he said.

The trees have experienced a lowered potential load because of extreme drought last year, according to Brown. A potential drought this year could make it harder on trees for the following year, so the small extra trim gives the orchard a head start for the next year.

"A lot of times if you have a dry year, it makes them a little stressed and makes it a harder to set a crop," he said. "Sometimes the trees give up a little bit."

This year, although Brown has seen signs of stress, he is optimistic about the final yield, although the peaches may not be quite as full a crop as last year. Dry conditions and cold mornings of this season's springtime have taken their toll. "It's going to be respectable but not a lot of crop," he said.

The apple set, however, looks even more promising. With varying factors of weather, rainfall, pollination, and bloom, "it's hard to know what's going to happen, but right now it looks like we're going to have a nice apple crop." The apples have already been thinned chemically.

Peaches, on the other hand, are "very hard to tell in bloom what's going to stick and what's not going to stick, and we don't want an excessive crop going into a dry year."

The strawberry crop "had some freeze on the earliest variety, but it still looks like a decent crop and the later ones look fine," Brown said. They have not irrigated the strawberry crop yet this season.

Brown expects to begin selling strawberries during the week of May 19, depending on the weather, and estimates that the strawberry season will last until third week of June.

Ideal weather for the orchards in the upcoming weeks would include temperatures in the upper 70s to low 80s by day and upper 50s at night, according to Brown, "and a nice inch of rain once a week."

Approximately 120 employees, 50 of them full time, work at the market and in the orchards.

Home-grown specialties include tree-ripened fruits such as apples, nectarines and pears, plus berries and 20 acres of sweet corn and 4-5 acres of pumpkins.

The orchard is 180 acres, made up of 50 acres of apples and 40 acres of peaches followed by five or less acres each of nectarines, pears, or sweet cherries.

The Browns gear production for direct market sales, then open the excess to the pick-your-own market.

Medical Center Launches Treadmill Evaluation Service

LEESBURG, Va. — The Marion duPont Scott Equine Medical Center has introduced a new diagnostic service for the regional horse community by opening the James P. Mills Diagnostic Treadmill Building.

New research capabilities made possible by the high-speed treadmill facility will also boost the university affiliated equine hospital's growing stature as a biomedical research institution.

Similar in concept if not in scale to a human treadmill, the high-speed equine diagnostic unit, capable of operating at speeds up to 60 miles per hour, will be used to evaluate a horse's respiratory, cardiovascular, and musculoskeletal functions under vigorous exercise. The 2,800-square-foot building is heated and air conditioned so that horses exercise in a controlled environment while diagnostic tools are in use.

While the horse is working on the treadmill, a video endoscope may be used to visually examine the patient's upper airway to diagnose respiratory problems not evident at rest. One of the distinctive design features of the James P. Mills Diagnostic Treadmill Building is a structural arrangement which will allow up to five video cameras to be positioned around or over the horse. These cameras will be used to document and analyze subtle gait problems. Information related to heart, respiration, and gait also will provide useful data for clinical research projects.

"This is a magnificent facility," said Dr. Peter Eyre, dean of the Virginia-Maryland Regional College of Veterinary Medicine during a keynote address at the building's dedication. 'Many people have been responsible for getting us to this point."

Money used to construct the new facility was donated by the private sector. The building is named in honor of founding Council Member James P. Mills, a noted horseman and breeder who was a leader in achieving early diagnostic advances at the center. Several fund-raising initiatives have been undertaken in recent years to support the treadmill building and equipment.

"Horse owners have worked hard to make this new facility a reality, and I know they will be excited by the opportunities it will create," said Dr. G. Frederick Fregin, the Jean Ellen duPont Shehan professor and director of the center. 'Opening this service allows us to offer a critical, systematic approach to understanding the pathogenesis, response to treatment, and possible prevention of well documented equine problems faced by the industry."

The Marion duPont Scott Equine Medical Center, located in Leesburg, Va., is one of three campuses operated by the Virginia-Maryland Regional College of Veterinary Medicine, a two-state professional school with major campus facilities at Virginia Tech in Blacksburg and the University of Maryland at College Park. The Equine Medical Center offers 24-hour emergency referral service along with surgical, medical, and diagnostic services.

Farmers Union Calls For Emergency Disaster Assistance

WASHINGTON, D.C. — National Farmers Union is calling on U.S. House and Senate leaders to support emergency disaster assistance to producers devastated by drought and other natural disasters last year.

"We are disappointed these needs were not addressed in the farm bill conference, especially since the Senate overwhelmingly supported the provision in their version of the farm bill," said NFU President Dave Frederickson. "Now, we urge Congress to use the defense appropriations supplemental as an opportunity to move disaster assistance forward."

Frederickson sent letters to Speaker of the House Dennis Hastert, R-Ill. and Senate Majority Leader Tom Daschle, D-S.D., asking for their support of an emergency disaster provision by including it in the defense appropriations supplemental under discussion next week in the House.

The emergency disaster assistance provisions originally introduced by Senator Max Baucus, D-Mont., includes $1.8 billion in crop production loss assistance and $500 million in livestock assistance for losses nationally.

Montana experienced millions of dollars in agricultural losses and a more than 40 percent reduction in wheat production due to drought. The U.S. Secretary of Agriculture designated the entire state of Montana a disaster area. Significant portions of many other states were also declared disaster areas due to drought, disease and insect infestations.

"Our producers have been desperately seeking support for emergency assistance as time passes, losses increase, and the financial and emotional suffering of rural families continues," Frederickson said. "Disaster assistance with an emergency designation is vital."

Forage Expo, Dairy Tours To Highlight Forage Conference

BLOOMINGTON, Minn. — Two events intended for farmers and other agricultural professionals will be highlights at this year's American Forage and Grassland Council (AFGC) Annual Conference. The event is scheduled July 14-17 in Bloomington, Minn.

The producer days at the conference will take place July 16-17, with a $50 registration fee for the two-day segment.

Beginning at 8 a.m. July 16, conference participants will hear forage producers from across North America talk about their success in forage production practices during the Forage Spokesperson Contest.

At 11:30 a.m., attendees will board buses for the producer tour "Minnesota Dairying: More Than One Future." The tour will take participants to three successful dairy operations. Following the tour, a Minnesota style on-farm steak barbecue and live auction will take place at one of the hosting dairy farms.

On July 17, participants will travel by bus to Umore Park in Rosemount, to see opening day of the 2002 Minnesota Forage Expo. This premier showcase of Minnesota's forage industry offers forage producers the opportunity to witness a variety of educational presentations on forage industry research, in-field harvesting and storage demonstrations, and hay sampling demonstrations.

Farm Link To Sponsor Meeting On Expanding Farm Markets

NEW STANTON (Westmoreland Co.) — Producers and beginning farmers who want to learn how to grow their sales through farmers' markets and Community Supported Agriculture (CSA) are invited to attend a Pennsylvania Farm Link-sponsored meeting at Paul Sarver's farm June 19, from 7 p.m.-9:30 p.m.

Sarver will explain how his gradual expansion of his farming business from 1.6 acres to 8 acres in organic produce and pastured poultry.

Starting with sales at farmers' markets, Sarver will explain his retail and wholesales sales strategies. He will describe growing transplants in the greenhouse, how he grew the business, farming practices, his interest in working with and encouraging youth in agriculture, and will provide a tour of the farm.

CSA, or subscription farming, is grower contracting and can be applied to any type of farm. The producer "contracts" with the consumer to provide a specific type of product during a specific time period and with a specific delivery date.

Sarver will describe how he started his CSA and will provide information for participants on how to start a CSA in their own communities.

Information on marketing trends and ways to direct market will be included. Farm Link Director Marion Bowlan will explain how to do market research and tips to develop a marketing plan.

DIRECTIONS: Take the Pennsylvania Turnpike to the New Stanton exit. Take Rt. 66 north (toll) to exit 6. Turn left at the exit, at the Dairy Queen (about a mile, turn right). The road doglegs and the Sarver farmstead is the second brick house on the right.

Contact Pennsylvania Farm Link at (717) 664-7077 by June 17 to let them know of your planned attendance at this free marketing meeting and for additional information on other events.

Pennsylvania Farm Show 2003

Building For The Future

It's Fair Time

Come out to one of the greatest agricultural fairs of the area. The 48th annual 2002 Kempton County Fair will be June 13-15. The fairgrounds are located at 83 Community Drive, Kempton.

Gates open at 4 p.m. on Thursday, June 13. For the 48th year, the farm stock tractor pull contest is scheduled to begin at 6 p.m. commencing with the 4,500-pound farm stock class through the 9,500-pound. For additional information or to register, please call (610) 759-6442.

Saturday at noon the Es Lieblichst Maedel (Miss Kempton Fair) will be conducted. For information on the pageant, call (610) 926-6038.

The fair has a petting zoo, many animal exhibits, and livestock shows of dairy, swine, sheep and rabbits. Thursday at 7 p.m. is the 4-H and FFA Sheep Show. Friday at 5 p.m, the Rabbit Show and 7 p.m. the Swine Show. Saturday at 11:30 a.m. the Dairy Show.

Daily activities include sampling good food, games, rides, petting zoo, competitive exhibits, animal exhibits, plus so much more.

Kempton is located on Route 143, five miles north of Route 22 from Lenhartsville Interchange (four miles east of Hamburg) and on Route 737, 10 miles north of Kutztown, Route 309 to Route 143 to Kempton. Kempton is just 30 miles west of Allentown and 35 miles north of Reading. Fair hours are Thursday and Friday from 4 to 11 p.m. and Saturday from 11 a.m. to midnight. There is an admission fee of $5 per person, $3 for children six to 12 years old, and under six free, with free parking. For more information, please call (610) 756-6444.

Young Workers Should Be Especially Aware Of Farm Safety

UNIVERSITY PARK (Centre Co.) — A safety expert in Penn State's College of Agricultural Sciences recommends that farm families evaluate safety concerns for younger workers this spring.

In 2000, 22 percent of farm-related fatalities in Pennsylvania affected youth age 19 or younger. "On a farm, work, living and recreation areas overlap," said Dennis Murphy, professor of agricultural engineering. "Children as young as two years of age often are exposed to operating machinery."

Agriculture is the state's largest industry, with some 59,000 farms, of which nearly 90 percent are family-owned. "Labor often is supplied by children, a spouse and perhaps older or temporary workers," said Murphy. "Farms are usually small operations that are not regulated by the Occupational Safety and Health Administration. The work often is done in a variety of conditions, ranging from extreme heat to extreme cold, in rain, sleet, snow or mud."

A survey taken in New York found that most families stopped operating their farm within five years of a fatal farm accident. "The aftermath of an accident can leave relatives devastated both emotionally and financially," Murphy said.

National Safety Council statistics show that tractor rollover, truck-related injuries, machinery entanglements and drowning are the leading causes of death for agricultural workers under age 25.

Murphy said Penn State Cooperative Extension offers many programs to teach younger workers about farm safety. Many of Pennsylvania's 67 county cooperative extension offices hold farm safety camps on a regular basis. Other counties have instituted special programs aimed at younger workers, including a tractor driving safety course.

"Make sure tasks are appropriate for a younger person," Murphy said. "Pay particular attention to youths operating farm equipment, handling agricultural chemicals and working with livestock." Murphy points out that younger farm workers also are at risk when taking part in rural leisure activities such as swimming or driving all-terrain vehicles.

Murphy cites preventative measures recommended by the National Safety Council for young farm workers:

- Equip all tractors with a rollover protective structure and wear a seat belt when operating tractors.
- Never carry riders on tractors or equipment and never ride as a passenger on a tractor or equipment.
- Maintain all farm vehicles and wear seat belts while operating them.
- Review the operating manual before operating any equipment.
- Parents and young workers should attend training on safe and healthy work practices.
- Stay out of farm ponds and other bodies of water unless they are posted as safe swimming areas. Always swim with at least one other person.

Conservation District Showcases Stormwater Management Practices

HARRISBURG (Dauphin Co.) — DEP Southeast Regional Director Joseph A. Feola congratulated the Chester County Conservation District May 9 for developing a self-guided stormwater best management practices (BMP) tour that will allow planners and developers to learn by example.

DEP joined local officials and Chester County planners in a kickoff tour of five of 21 completed demonstration sites within the Christina Basin and the Valley Creek watersheds.

"People should know that there are alternative methods of handling stormwater," Feola said. "Through this project, Chester County Conservation District has taken the initiative to recognize successful practices in its area and to open a doorway for other land managers who may be interested in learning about — and seeing firsthand — some successful ways to prevent polluted runoff."

Through a $12,200 Growing Greener Grant, the Chester County Conservation District created the self-guided tour, intended to introduce planners and developers to variety of stormwater BMPs that they might incorporate to promote watershed protection.

The project also includes development of maintenance plans for the owner/operators of the BMP.

The conservation district created a tour guide handbook describing 21 locations to visit in Chester County that have successfully implemented BMPs to address stormwater runoff pollution. Sites on the tour include shopping centers, golf courses, schools, parks, residential developments, municipal properties and corporate centers that feature a variety of methods designed to manage stormwater and prevent nonpoint source pollution from reaching waterways.

"Uncontrolled development and resulting polluted runoff are major threats to water quality in the Valley Creek system," Chester County Conservation District Manager Dan Greig said. "Utilizing BMPs for stormwater control is part of our strategy for protecting the Christina Basin and the Valley Creek watersheds."

Chain Saw Safety, Forestry Workshop June 1

CRANBERRY (Venango Co.) — On Saturday, June 1, a full day on chain saw safety techniques and forestry workshop will be conducted in Cranberry, Venango County.

The morning session is designed to help anyone who operates a chain saw. The presenter, Dan Hartranft of Penn Harvest Systems, is a professional logger and training instructor for the "Game of Logging," which is intended for professional loggers. The presentation for this workshop will be focused on the techniques for nonprofessional users, including personal protective equipment, chain saw safety, and proper felling techniques using an open face notch.

After lunch, those who attend will look at what is meant by timber stand improvement and what woodlot owners can do to improve their timber resources for multiple benefits.

The workshop will also look at options for dealing with the consequences of previous timber mismanagement.

There will be a sign-up sheet at the workshop for those participants who would like to enroll in a full-day, hands-on instruction of the Game of Loggers for Landowners. More information will be available at the workshop.

The workshop will be Saturday, June 1 from 9 a.m.-3:30 p.m. at Tom' and Kandy Newton's woodlot, off Rt. 322, near the State Police Barracks in Cranberry. The woodlot is located on Victory Church Road, just north of Bucktail Road. Signs will be posted the day of the event.

The workshop will be held rain or shine. The entire program will be outdoors, so dress accordingly. The cost is $10 per person, which includes lunch and materials. Registration will be limited to the first 50 registrants, and the deadline for registration is May 24. Preregistration is required for the workshop.

For more information on the clinic, contact Nelson Smith at the Clarion County Cooperative Extension at (814)782-0033. Registration forms are also available at other county extension offices.

DEMONSTRATION AREAS SHED LIGHT ON FOREST RESOURCES MANAGEMENT

Tracey Coulter And Rance Scott Harmon
Penn State Forest Resources Extension

On a crisp day last autumn, Service Forester Tom Strausbaugh led 35 landowners and foresters on a tour of the Bald Eagle State Forest Demonstration Area n Union County.

Because timber harvesting and other forest management pracices can have long-term, dramatc effects on forests, Strausbaugh elped create the area so visitors could see the results of different practices firsthand. For example, n one of the demonstration units, Strausbaugh points out that after removing smaller, less vigorous rees, the remaining "crop" trees esponded by significantly inreasing their growth rates, beause there was less competition or sunlight, water, and nutrients. The result is heartier trees that an grow faster and produce nore wildlife food, such as nuts nd seeds.

One of the most eye-opening tops on the tour is a ¼-acre area nclosed by a woven-wire fence. The fence prevents white-tailed leer access, and there is a dranatic difference in vegetation in*side and outside of the fence.* Not nly are the tree seedlings and prouts unbrowsed and much aller in the fenced area, there is lso a much greater diversity of rees, shrubs, wildflowers, and ther plants.

Last year, legislators toured he site with Dr. Gary Alt, of the Pennsylvania Game Commision's Deer Management Section, o see firsthand how a large deer opulation reduces forest regeneration and growth.

The Bald Eagle State Forest Demonstration Area contains ine different management units. Eight of these units show differnt timber harvesting methods, nd one is a control area where o trees were cut. The units repesent examples of both good and oor forestry practices, and Strausbaugh shows the group the enefits and consequences of ach.

In the past year, Strausbaugh as led tours for Conservation District staff members, 4-H roups, and forest landowner associations. Strausbaugh is particularly proud of the youth groups hat use the demonstration area s a learning resource.

A group of local homeschool tudents used the site to prepare or the Snyder County Envirohon competition, and won. The Snyder, Union, and Northumberand Future Farmers of America FFA) hold their annual timber ompetition at the demonstration rea.

Currently, in a joint environnental education program with R.B. Winter State Park, lesson lans for different ages are being leveloped. The lessons cover diverse environmental issues and elp educators incorporate forest esources management into their ourses.

A self-guiding trail allows peole to visit the Bald Eagle Demonstration Area at their convenience. A trail guide is available at the Bald Eagle State Forest District Office, in Union County about 8 miles West of Mifflinburg on PA-45. The trail guide provides directions to the demonstration site, which is less than a mile from the District Office. The office is typically open from 8:00 a.m. to 4:30 p.m. on weekdays, but visitors can tour the demonstration area anytime.

The demonstration site's trail also winds through the adjacent State Game Lands allowing visitors to see various wildlife management practices, such as brush piles, grape vine management, border cuts, herbaceous openings, a vernal pond, crab apple tree plantings (with protective tree shelters), and wildlife nesting structures.

Forest management demonstration areas are located across the state. Tree Farmer George Freeman has a Forest Stewardship Demonstration area on his property in Clarion County. The site developed in cooperation with Penn State's Forest Resources Cooperative Extension is one of six Forest Stewardship Demonstration areas in Pennsylvania. If you can't see it in person, you can visit the Freeman Tree Farm online at http://www.virtualforest.psu.edu.

On this virtual tour, visitors see maps and photographs taken at the Tree Farm and demonstration area. Written descriptions accompany the photographs of the demonstration site and compare different harvesting techniques. Another part of the Website evaluates the Freeman Tree Farm using specific criteria and indicators of sustainability (the Montreal Process).

Managing forest resources is a complex issue in Pennsylvania. Since private forest landowners hold over sixty percent of Pennsylvania's 17 million acres of forestland, the management of these private lands has a large impact on the overall sustainability of forest resources in the Commonwealth.

Forest management demonstration areas give visitors an opportunity to see different management techniques firsthand, and allow landowners and citizens to make informed decisions. The sites demonstrate that with proper planning and careful management, private forest landowners can maintain vigorous, healthy, and productive forests.

For information about forest demonstration sites in your area, contact the Pennsylvania Bureau of Forestry service forester assigned to your county.

For information about how to contact your service forester or for a list of free forest stewardship publications, call the Pennsylvania Forest Stewardship Program at 1-800-235-WISE (toll-free).

The Pennsylvania Forest Stewardship Program provides private forestland owners with information and assistance to promote healthy and productive forests. Its sponsors include the Pennsylvania Bureau of Forestry and USDA Forest Service, in partnership with the Penn State's Forest Resources Extension.

On The Road To Sustainable Agriculture: A National Conference

GRIFFIN, Ga. — On the Road to Sustainable Agriculture will combine adventure and fresh local foods into a harvest-time educational experience, Oct. 23-26, in and around Raleigh-Durham, N.C.

Sponsored by Southern Region Sustainable Agriculture Research and Education (SARE), the national conference will highlight innovative methods some farmers are using to increase profits, protect natural resources and improve the quality of life in their communities.

Since 1988, the SARE program of the Cooperative Research, Education and Extension Service has been the USDA's primary means of studying and spreading the word about sustainable agriculture.

State-of-the-art chartered buses will transport participants from the Sheraton Imperial Conference Center after breakfast on Thursday and Friday to visit farms on picturesque back roads and bustling markets on historic city streets. All meals at the hotel and on the road will feature fresh local foods such as North Carolina pork, chicken, sweet potatoes, apples, greens and dairy products.

During the tours participants will be able to see where much of the food was grown as the conference rolls through land that was first farmed in the 1620s.

Today North Carolina is one of the most diversified agriculture states in the nation with 57,000 farmers growing 80 different crops and contributing $46 billion annually to the economy.

The buses will take different routes so individual farms will not be overwhelmed by visitors, but each tour stop will address one or more of the conference themes which include urban sprawl, organics, direct marketing, limited-resource farmers, environmental issues and production systems in transition.

More than 30 farms and markets will be part of the two-day tour. They range in size from the 2,200-acre Center for Environmental Farming Systems to five acres of intense production at Peregrine Farm where Alex and Betsy Hitt use a computer to keep track of 10-year rotations of 57 kinds of flowers and 60 varieties of vegetables.

Others stops include a bed and breakfast inn that serves guests its own farmstead goat cheese, fresh eggs and local vegetables.

Another farm offers gourmet shopping at it's own store with pastured chicken, beef and pork frozen in dinner-sized packages along with homemade pasta, pasta sauce and frozen apple pies. Visitors will sample old-time apple flavors at the peak of the season when they stroll through a small orchard where espalier growing techniques maximize space so that 450 heirloom varieties grow on 200 trees.

At another stop, there's a hydroponic greenhouse that produces 1,500 pounds of tomatoes per day during the season. Filtered swine waste water does double duty by fertilizing the tomatoes and producing methane energy for the farm.

A trip to the bustling Carrboro Farmers Market will show why it is considered a model for both producer and customer satisfaction. More than 100 sites were considered in choosing the 30 stops that will provide the most useful information combined with comfort and beautiful surroundings.

Evening programs at the Sheraton Imperial will give a broader perspective to what is presented during the farm visits. On Wednesday evening five successful farmers will launch the conference with Keeping It Between The Ditches, a panel discussion about overcoming barriers on the road to sustainability. Alex Hitt will be there. So will La Rhea Pepper, who helped start an organic cotton cooperative in Texas, which now supplies more than 25 percent of all U.S. organic cotton.

Claud Evans of Oklahoma manages parasite in cashmere goats with rotational grazing and also adds value to his cashmere by combing it out instead of shearing.

Steve Groff, the no-till pioneer from Pennsylvania will talk about his farm's journey from severe erosion to healthy soil. Mark Frasier will share milestones from his transition to holistic management ranching on 29,000 acres of eastern Colorado.

Thursday evening David Pimentel, ecologist/biologist from Cornell University, will speak on Food, Sustainability and Natural Resources.

Saturday morning's wrap-up session will feature Jules Pretty, director of the Centre for Environment and Society at the University of Essex, England, addressing the urgent need for the next agricultural revolution.

On Friday night buses will be available to take participants to the North Carolina State Fair or downtown Raleigh or Chapel Hill.

Registration forms will be available after June 15 on the Southern SARE Website at www.griffin.peachnet.edu/sare or contact Gwen Roland at (770) 412-4786 or groland@griffin.peachnet.edu.

Workshop For Forest Landowners Planned

UNIVERSITY PARK (Centre Co.) — Forest landowners are invited to attend a day-long workshop entitled Planning For Your Forest's Future: Understanding Forest Ecology. It is scheduled for 8:30 p.m. to 4:00 p.m. Friday, June 28, at Grey Towers, home of Gifford Pinchot in Milford.

This hands-on workshop will focus on forest ecology, developing a forest stewardship plan for your land, understanding how harvesting effects the forest, and how to find the right resource professional to help you manage your forest and plan for the future.

Dr. Jim Finley of the Penn State School of Forest Resources will be leading the workshop. "The Decision Tree, Timber Harvesting for Plants and Wildlife Habitat in PA", a manual developed for the PA Audubon Society by Dr. Finley and Penn State will be introduced.

The afternoon portion of this workshop will be spent in the woods learning how to evaluate forests and discussing how they change with time and management.

This program is sponsored by Penn State Cooperative Extension, PA DCNR Bureau of Forestry, the Delaware Highlands Conservancy, North Branch Land Trust, Countryside Conservancy, and other local and trusts and conservation districts.

Space is limited to 50 participants and advance registration is required. Call the Penn State Cooperative Extension Office at 570-825-1701 for more information and registration.

Stream Identification Signs Installed In Susquehanna Basin

HARRISBURG (Dauphin Co.) — As part of Pennsylvania's first May Watershed Awareness Month, many municipalities, county conservation districts, local watershed organizations and other civic groups throughout the Pennsylvania portion of the Susquehanna basin will begin installing new stream identification signs that were provided by the Susquehanna River Basin Commission (SRBC).

Using funds from the Pennsylvania Department of Environmental Protection Growing Greener Program and the Pennsylvania Delegation of the Chesapeake Bay Commission, SRBC earlier this year approved more than 540 separate stream signage projects in 32 counties to identify streams, rivers, creeks and runs. The signs will be installed immediately before bridges on state roads that cross over waterways.

According to Paul Swartz, SRBC Executive Director, the stream signage program is a good educational tool to connect people to their watersheds. SRBC is encouraging sign recipients to install their signs in May to highlight Watershed Awareness Month, which was declared today by Gov. Mark Schweiker and legislators.

June, which in Pennsylvania is Rivers Month, also is being targeted for sign installations. (Some signs were installed in April as part of Earth Day activities.)

"By raising public awareness, we encourage people to protect their water resources," said Swartz. "Through SRBC's signage program, many waterways in 32 of the 43 counties located in the Pennsylvania portion of the basin will be marked."

Swartz said, "We thank Pennsylvania's Growing Greener Program for making this signage program possible and the Chesapeake Bay Commission for supplementing the program."

The complete list of approved projects and the organizations or agencies that applied for the signs is attached. The list is also available on SRBC's web site at HYPERLINK "http://www.srbc.net" www.srbc.net (select Programs and Activities, then Stream Signage Program).

Selenium Uptake In Berries Offers Organic Option In Nutrition

COLUMBUS, Ohio — Small fruit crops such as strawberries and black raspberries can effectively uptake selenium, increasing concentrations of the nutrient in its leaves and berries and providing potential health benefits for consumers.

Ohio State University researchers have found that by adding 500 parts per million of selenium as a foliar spray onto newly emerging plant leaves, selenium uptake in the leaves increased 162 percent and in berries increased 96 percent. By doubling the amount of selenium added to the plant, uptake in the leaves increased 446 percent and in berries increased 240 percent.

The purpose of the work is to determine the bioavailability of components such as selenium in plant products and how that availability can meet a consumer's nutritional needs.

"Ohio soils in general are low in selenium and have high concentrations of iron which can restrict selenium uptake in plants," said Dick Funt, an Ohio State small fruit specialist. "If we can find a way to add selenium to plants and increase uptake in the berries, then that might make for an improved consumer product."

Berries are known to contain a wide array of nutritional components and antioxidants that help in fighting off cancer and prevent some medical conditions, such as heart disease. Studies have shown that selenium, a mineral found in berries in varying amounts, produces antibodies, helps to maintain a healthy heart and liver, and may help prevent certain cancers such as prostate and lung cancers. Other studies have shown that selenium combined with vitamin E provides an added health benefit.

"Selenium is looked upon as necessary, not just for prostate cancer, but for other illnesses and diseases," said Funt.

Funt said one of the goals of the project is to find the right amount of selenium that the plants will uptake and hold in meeting daily nutritional recommendations. "Adding 500 ppm of selenium increased selenium concentrations in berries from .233 to 2.2 ppm per gram of freeze-dried berries. By adding 1,000 ppm of selenium, that number jumped to 5.5 ppm per gram," said Funt. "We want to know what that translates into when it comes to recommended dietary intake — if that's sufficient for what people need."

The recommended daily intake of selenium is 55 micrograms (mcg) for women and 70 mcg for men, although nutritionists argue that amount can be increased to at least 200 mcg for added health benefits. Selenium taken in large doses, however, can cause medical problems. Doses of 800 mcg per day can cause loss of hair, nails, and teeth, and gastrointestinal upset.

Ohio State researchers have just begun their fourth year of studies of nutrient uptake in plants and have found that selenium uptake in the plants varies among cultivars and among soil types in Ohio.

"Selenium uptake is more efficient before bloom and some cultivars uptake selenium more effectively than others," said Funt.

The researchers plan to extend the study to other berries, such as blueberries and red raspberries. "We are looking at the berry as a vehicle for possibly having a safer effect on nutrient consumption than what one would take through a vitamin," said Funt. "At least consumers would have the option of meeting their dietary allowances through either a chemical or an organic form."

Pa. 2002 Vegetable Intentions

HARRISBURG Dauphin Co.) — Processors in Pennsylvania intend to contract 8,000 acres of snap beans in 2002, two percent less than the 8,200 acres contracted in 2001, according to the Pennsylvania Agricultural Statistics Service.

Sweet corn processors intend to contract 1,500 acres, up 131 percent from the 650 contracted in 2001. Tomato processors data is not published for Pennsylvania in an effort not to disclose individual operations.

United States' processors plan to contract 1.26 million acres of vegetables in 2002 for the nation's five major vegetable crops (snap beans, sweet corn, cucumbers for pickles, green peas, and tomatoes), up three percent from 2001. Acreage for freezing at 393,400 acres is down seven percent, while acreage for canning, forecast at 866,800 acres is up nine percent from 2001. For 2001 comparable States, increased acreage for snap beans, cucumbers for pickles, green peas, and tomatoes more than offset decreased acreage for sweet corn.

U.S. snap bean processors intend to contract 198,500 acres, up two percent from last year. Contracted acres for freezing are at 59,900, down 16 percent from 2001. Contracted acreage for canning, at 138,600 acres, is up 12 percent from 2001. Sweet corn processors intend to contract 435,100 acres, down five percent from the previous year. Contracted acreage for freezing at 211,500 acres is seven percent less than last year's total, and contracted acreage for canning, at 223,600 acres is three percent less than last year. Tomato processors plan to contract 310,400 acres in 2002, an increase of 13 percent from last year. Contract production at 11.11 million tons is 22 percent above 2001.

U.S. pickle packers intend to contract 93,000 acres, 21 percent above last year. Green pea processors intend to contract 224,100 acres, up three percent from last year. Contracted acreage for freezing, at 122,900 acres is two percent less than last year's total, and contracted acreage for canning at 101,200 acres is 11 percent above than last year.

SE Regional Fruit Growers Meeting May 21

POTTSVILLE (Schuylkill Co.) — Fruit growers and individuals interested in growing fruit are invited to the twilight meeting sponsored by Penn State Cooperative Extension, Tuesday, May 21 at 6:30 p.m. at Highland Orchards Inc., 1000 Thorndale Road, West Chester. This meeting will qualify for update credits toward pesticide recertification.

Dr. Greg Krawczyk, Penn State Extension Entomologist from the Biglerville Fruit and Extension Research Center, will give an update on current insect problems in fruit. Dr. Robert Crassweller, Penn State extension pomologist, will discuss early season use of plant growth regulators. Also, a sprayer calibration demonstration will be conducted.

For additional information contact George Perry (570) 622-4225 or Cheryl Bjornson (610) 696-3500, Penn State extension horticulture agents.

Pa.'s 2001 Honey Production Down 2 Percent

HARRISBURG (Dauphin Co.) — Pennsylvania honey production in 2001 (from producers with five or more hives) totaled 969,000 pounds, down two percent from 2000, according to the Pennsylvania Agricultural Statistics Service (PASS).

There were an estimated 17,000 colonies statewide, down 5,000 from last year. The average yield was 57 pounds per colony. Average yield per colony in 2000 was 45 pounds. Total stocks of honey, as of Dec. 15, 2001, were 514,000 pounds, seven percent less than the previous year.

Honey producers in Pennsylvania received an average price of 87 cents per pound for the 2001 crop. Total value of honey produced in 2001 is estimated at 843,000 dollars for Pennsylvania production. Pennsylvania ranks 27th in the nation for honey production.

A sample of honey producers were contacted in December 2001 for information on number of colonies, honey production, honey stocks on hand for sale, and prices received for honey sold during 2001.

Nationally, honey production in 2001 from producers with five or more hives totaled 186 million pounds, down 16 percent from 2000. There were 2.51 million colonies producing honey in 2001, down four percent from 2000. The yield per colony averaged 74.0 pounds, down 10.1 pounds from the 84.1 pounds in 2000. Producer honey stocks were 64.8 million pounds on Dec. 15, 2001, down 24 percent from a year earlier.

Prices for the 2001 U.S. honey crop averaged 66.9 cents per pound, up 12 percent from 59.7 cents in 2000. Honey prices are based on retail sales by producers and sales to private processors and co-ops.

Grazing Meetings Set For Dairy, Beef

BLOOMSBURG (Columbia Co.) — Penn State extension in the Central Susquehanna Region is sponsoring educational meetings for persons interested in grazing management for dairy cattle and livestock.

The first meeting will be Thursday, May 23 at 10 a.m. at the Enos Beiler Farm, near Elimsport, in Lycoming County. Enos has been operating his dairy farm using intensive rotational grazing for approximately 10 years. A variety of grass species have been utilized along with several types of clover overseeded to increase stand life and density. The walking tour will discuss the practical methods Enos uses to determine when to move animals and how to improve long-term stand quality. There will be discussion on the proper use of pasture measuring sticks and how they can be used to maintain stand life and gauge quality. Dr. Sandy Costello, the new Extension Dairy Agent, will be joining the group to discuss issues related to dairy nutritional needs from pasture.

Directions: From the Lewisburg/New Columbia area: Take Rt. 44 from Rt. 15 in Allenwood. Follow Rt. 44 to the center of Elimsport, turn right, follow Rt. 44 to the first farm on the right. From the Williamsport area: Take Rt. 15 south to Rt. 54 at the bottom of the mountain, turn right at the light, and follow until you are within site of Elimsport. Beiler's is the last farm on the left before town. Look for the Penn State extension meeting sign at the end of the lane.

The second meeting will be Tuesday, June 11 at 7 p.m. at the Bill Deitrick Farm, near New Columbia, in Union County. Bill purchases locally-produced stocker cattle to finish on pasture for direct marketing to his customers. Most calves are purchased during the fall and winter and are grazed as yearlings during the following season. We will be looking at water system and also discussing some weed control challenges on certain areas of the farm.

Directions: Take the New Columbia exit from Rt. 15 just south of I-80. Follow New Columbia Road west for three miles. Turn right onto Furnace Road. The Deitrick Farm is the first farm on the left.

The third meeting will be Friday, June 28 at 10 a.m. at the Tim and Denise Wetzel Farm near Freeburg in Snyder County. The Wetzels operate a dairy farm using rotational intensive grazing. They milk 85 registered Holstein cows and have 260 acres in grasslands. They are in the process of major reseeding to eliminate troublesome areas of tall fescue. This has involved sequential spraying with Roundup and no-till reseeding with orchardgrass and white clover. Hay and haylage harvesting is done by custom operators. Manure is hauled by a custom operator. Shelled corn and silage are purchased from neighboring cash crop producers.

Directions: The farm is located along Rt. 35 between Freeburg and Mount Pleasant Mills in Snyder County. If coming from Rts. 11 and 15 in the Selinsgrove area the farm is about three miles beyond Freeburg. The farm name is Mabarbil. Look for the meeting signs at the end of the lane.

Penn State encourages persons with disabilities to participate in its programs and activities. If you anticipate needing any type of accommodation or have questions about the physical access provided, please call David Hartman at (570) 784-6660 in advance of your participation or visit.

NCGA Congratulates President On Farm Bill Signing

WASHINGTON, D.C. — At 7:40 a.m. EDT May 13, President George W. Bush signed the 2002 Farm Bill into law. The National Corn Growers Association (NCGA) played an active role in the Farm Bill process and was pleased to see the president take quick action by signing this legislation.

"Success of farmers and ranchers is essential to success of the American economy," Bush said during the signing ceremony. "This bill is generous and provides a safety net for farmers. It will do so without encouraging overproduction and depressing prices."

Now that the president has signed the legislation into law, the U.S. Department of Agriculture will turn to the difficult task of implementing the new policies and programs over the next few months.

NCGA President Tim Hume, a corn grower from Walsh, Colo., said, "With spring planting under way, quick passage of the farm bill was critical. NCGA thanks the president for his prompt action in giving farmers an economic safety net for this crop year and looks with anticipation to the USDA as it begins its work implementing the bill."

The new Farm Bill will:

- Stem the tide of unbudgeted ad hoc assistance that has been required year after year, including over $30 billion over the last four years,
- Fully maintain the market-oriented features of the 1996 Farm Bill, having minimal impact on price and production according to economic analysis,
- Fully maintain the planting flexibility of the 1996 Farm Bill,
- Provide for the largest investment in conservation ever — fully 80 percent above the levels of the Boehlert conservation amendment to the 1996 Farm Bill, and
- Replace the 1996 Farm Bill that is set to expire on Sept. 30 of this year.

Conservation is a key part of the new Farm Bill. "The Conservation Security Program is a new national incentive payment program that rewards producers for maintaining and increasing farm and ranch stewardship practices," said NCGA Director of Public Policy Sam Willett. "The Farm Bill will invest $2 billion towards this program."

Also in the area of conservation, the 2002 Farm Bill will increase federal investment in soil and water programs by more than 80 percent above current programs levels. "This will provide growers with more options to implement progressive conservation practices on their land," said Willett, "with the backing of increased technical assistance to producers using government or private contractors."

He also pointed out the 2002 Farm Bill will make all the needed changes to the Conservation Reserve Program and the Environmental Quality Incentives Program to make them more usable and accessible to all producers in all regions of the country.

The Bill also contains a first-ever Energy Title that includes a continuation of the Commodity Credit Corporation Bioenergy program.

The Energy Title also reauthorizes the Biomass Research and Development Act of 2000 through fiscal year 2007 and will create a new program where federal agencies give preference to purchasing biobased products, which should help energize emerging markets for these products.

Value-added market development grants have also been expanded to meet growers' interests in start-up farmer-owned value-added processing facilities while establishing resource centers to assist producers in value-added endeavors.

The new bill, according to a recent analysis by the Food and Agriculture Policy Research Institute, projects an increase in annual net farm income by an average of $3.8 billion. Conservation programs will contribute an estimated $0.7 billion per year.

Pennsylvania Waste Disposal Capacity Remains 12 Years

HARRISBURG (Dauphin Co.) — The Department of Environmental Protection (DEP) recently released a status report showing Pennsylvania has approximately 12 years of waste disposal capacity remaining at 49 municipal waste landfills and six resource recovery facilities in the state.

DEP based its calculations on actual waste received at the facilities in 2000, as reported by the waste disposal industry.

The figures show Pennsylvania has 12 years of waste disposal capacity statewide, an average of eight years of capacity in the eastern region of the state, nearly 11 years in the central region, and 21 years in the western region. DEP included waste disposed at resource recovery facilities as well as landfills in its calculations. Collectively, resource recovery facilities provide more than 38 million tons of waste disposal capacity for the commonwealth.

"Rather than ever increasing waste disposal capacity, DEP believes an integrated and balanced approach is needed to address waste management issues in Pennsylvania," Hess said. "We believe a two-year moratorium is the most effective way to reduce statewide waste disposal capacity to levels more inline with statewide and regional needs. An excess of waste disposal capacity is not consistent with an integrated and balanced waste management approach, which is in the best interest of the commonwealth.

"Clearly, we can't ignore the fact that an overabundance of disposal capacity restricts the commonwealth's efforts to implement source reduction and recycling programs which also provide significant contributions to the commonwealth's economy."

To help manage the commonwealth's waste disposal capacity, several bills have been introduced in the General Assembly that would establish restrictions on the number of landfill permits issued by DEP. House Bill 1436, introduced by Rep. Sam Smith (R-Jefferson), is one bill currently pending before the General Assembly that would enact a two-year moratorium on new landfill permits issued by DEP. During the past two years, DEP has issued six permits for the expansion of existing municipal waste landfills that met strict environmental standards, resulting in the addition of approximately 16 million tons of capacity. There are 17 landfill expansion applications pending before DEP, 11 of which, if approved, would add another 83.1 million tons of waste disposal capacity in the commonwealth.

Earlier this week, the Pennsylvania Waste Industries Association (PWIA) released a study it commissioned to examine the economic benefits of the waste industry in Pennsylvania. In the study, The Economics of the Waste Collection, Transportation, and Disposal Industry in Pennsylvania, PWIA claims that Pennsylvania is nearing a capacity crisis with less than 6.3 years of disposal capacity available statewide and less than two years of capacity in the eastern half of the state. In making these claims, however, the PWIA did not provide any specific information or calculations to support its claims. Additionally, the association overlooked the waste disposal capacity provided by resource recovery facilities located in the state.

According to PWIA's report, the municipal waste collection, transportation and disposal industry generated total revenues to Pennsylvania firms in 2000 of between $4.1 and $4.6 billion and was responsible for 18,798 to 19,451 jobs, which generated $634.8 million to $643.9 million in wages. In comparison, the recycling industry in Pennsylvania generates $18 billion in revenues and results in more than 81,000 jobs with wages totaling more than $3 billion.

While PWIA's perspective is built upon the economics of the waste hauling and disposal industry, waste disposal in Pennsylvania is more than just a business.

"DEP's strategy is to stabilize waste disposal capacity in the state without overlooking the needs and concerns of our communities who also must deal with waste disposal issues," Hess said. "For these reasons, state legislation, such as H.B. 1436, is needed in Pennsylvania to help manage the need for waste disposal capacity in the commonwealth."

Busines$ense Seminar Slated

UNIVERSITY PARK (Centre Co.) — Professionals serving the dairy industry will soon have access to the same valuable financial management training that has won the approval of many dairy producers in the state.

"Busines$ense" - management training for dairy CFOs, designed for service professionals, is scheduled for Tuesday and Wednesday, June 4-5, at the Penn State Harrisburg Campus in Middletown. The program will run from 9:30 a.m. to 8:30 p.m. on Tuesday, and 8 a.m. to 2:30 p.m. on Wednesday. Busines$ense is a project of Penn State's Dairy Alliance and is coordinated by information management specialist Brad Hilty.

Through participating in Busines$ense, members of the dairy service industry, from lenders to veterinarians, will gain a better understanding of the primary issues on which their clients should be focusing to operate successful dairy farm businesses. Busines$ense addresses the importance of benchmarks in identifying bottlenecks in an operation, investment management, data collection and organization and calculating production costs.

The program consists of formal instruction, group discussion, and hands-on computer analysis of realistic dairy scenarios, allowing participants in Busines$ense learn from each other as well as from instructors. The group will work with the 2001 Dairy Farm Business Analysis and DairyCOP$, a computerized cost of production analysis system developed by Hilty, in the hands-on segment of the training. Participants are encouraged to bring data from a client to work with for this part of the program.

To maximize the effectiveness of the program, class sizes are limited to 15-20 participants. For more information on the program contact Brad Hilty at (717) 503-8114 or HYPERLINK "mailto:bhilty@psu.edu" bhilty@psu.edu . To register for the workshop, call Tammy Perkins at (888) 373-PADA by Friday, May 24.

INTRODUCING THE WHITE 8000 SERIES PLANTERS

You've done your research, prepared your field, and picked the perfect seed variety. Now plant that perfect row, with the 8000 Series planter from White. With 49 models to match your needs, they're packed with features that save time and plant 4 to 31 rows of corn or soybeans with unmatched precision. The 8000 Series features an improved seed meter design for outstanding accuracy with a wider variety of seed sizes. And standard walking beam gauge wheels along with increased planting depth range of 1/4 inch to 4 inches give superior depth control over larger surface irregularities. Select models feature "on-the-go" seed rate adjustment from your tractor cab. FlexFrame designs range from 30' to 60' for an "acre-eater" performance from one end of your field to the other.

It's time to plant the perfect row. Stop by your White Planter Dealer today and get it right with WHITE.

AgriTalk Radio Show Comes To Lancaster

ANDY ANDREWS
Editor

LANCASTER (Lancaster Co.) — The Eden Resort Inn in Lancaster was the site of a nationally syndicated ag radio talk show Thursday morning.

Several area agri-industry representatives spoke about Lancaster County agriculture.

Hosted by veteran radio broadcaster Mike Adams, AgriTalk, which reaches about 80,000 listeners throughout the nation, spoke to several guests on a broadcast from about 11:06 a.m. to noon Thursday. AgriTalk was invited to speak by New Holland North America and included comments by Allen R. Rider, vice president, North America New Holland Ag Business.

Rider noted the importance of the newly signed Farm Bill, which he believes will go a long way toward stabilizing the farm industry, to "allow us to be a low-cost food producer," he told Lancaster Farming. He said the multibillion-dollar New Holland company has no intent to sell its equipment simply through dot-coms and direct sales. We "need to work with the farmer on a daily basis," he said.

Guests included Brent Landis, Lancaster Chamber of Commerce; Jim Shirk, PennAg Industries Poultry Council; and Heidi Schellenger, Lancaster Farmland Trust. Schellenger answered a telephone call-in during the show.

AgriTalk, an hour-long show, is broadcast from about 11 a.m.-noon EST (10-11 CST), reaching 25 states from New York to California, Adams noted. The company is owned by Doane Broadcasting, Bonner Springs, Kan., a division of Doane Agricultural Services. Adams hails from Kansas City, Kan.

The show's Website, www.agritalk.com, archives up to 10 broadcasts on Web audio.

JUNE IS DAIRY MONTH!

DAIRY PRODUCTS

Enrich our lives & taste Great!!

Lancaster Farming plans its annual festive June Dairy Month issue June 1 The issue will be packed with dairy farm features from around the region. Also scheduled will be dairy recipes and columns of interest to the dairy producer.

Nominations Due June 30

HARRISBURG (Dauphin Co.) — Local organizations concerned about water quality and other natural resource issues can get more involved by becoming an approved nominating organization for their county conservation district.

Conservation districts in Pennsylvania are subdivisions of state government that manage and direct conservation programs within county boundaries. They are governed by a board of directors appointed by the county government.

Nominating organizations recommend individuals to the county for appointment to the conservation district board of directors.

"District directors have an important say in how people in the county deal with many important natural resource issues such as water quality, forestry, agricultural best management practices and soil erosion," State Conservation Commission (SCC) Executive Secretary Karl Brown said. "Local organizations that have the ability to nominate individuals to serve on the conservation district board have an excellent way to make an impact on the future of the natural resources in their county."

An organization with interests in natural resource issues may be eligible for approval as a nominating organization if it is either countywide by title or nature, or if the organization represents the interests of a designated region in the county and at least 30 percent of the organization's membership resides within the county.

All nominating organizations must be approved by the SCC. In order to be able to be eligible to participate in the next round of nominations, organizations must be approved by the SCC at the July meeting.

Organizations interested in becoming nominating organizations should contact their county conservation district, the office of the chief clerk in their county, or the SCC in Harrisburg at (717) 787-8821 before the end of June.

Pa. Class Milk Price Announced

HARRISBURG (Dauphin Co.) — The Pennsylvania Milk Marketing Board (PMMB) announced the prices to be paid to Pennsylvania dairy farmers for April Class I milk (beverage) as an average of $15.52 in the western areas of the commonwealth, and an average of $16.01 in the central and eastern areas of the commonwealth. These prices include the over-order premium of $1.65 per one hundred pounds of milk.

Farmers, whose milk production is pooled under a federal order, will receive a marketwide blend price based upon the value of all classes of milk. However, the blend price received will vary as the component composition of a farmer's milk differs from the established benchmarks of 3.5 percent butterfat, 2.99 percent protein, and 5.69 percent other solids.

Plant Biotechnology Celebrates 20 Years Of Progress

WASHINGTON, D.C. — In the two decades since researchers announced they successfully developed the first plants enhanced by biotechnology, numerous biotech crops have been adopted by farmers across the U.S. and the world, resulting in an abundant food supply that can be grown on fewer acres with reduced environmental impact.

South Carolina farmer David Winkles said that's something to celebrate. "Biotech crops help us improve our stewardship of the environment," said Winkles, who is planting nearly 400 acres of biotech soybeans on his 1,000-acre farm this spring. "They allow me to spray less, plow less, and produce a higher quality crop more efficiently."

Winkles is not the only farmer who has seen the value of biotech crops. The USDA estimates the nation's farmers this spring will plant about 90 million acres of biotech soybeans, corn and cotton, up more than 10 percent from 2001.

Within the past 10 years, the adoption of biotech crops has been rapid, and USDA forecasts 74 percent of soybean acres, 32 percent of corn acres and 71 percent of cotton acres will be planted with biotechnology-derived varieties this year.

The environmental benefits of biotech crops farmers are seeing today began 20 years ago with research conducted by scientists, such as Mary-Dell Chilton, who led one of the first collaborative efforts to successfully incorporate specific genes into the DNA of plants through methods of biotechnology — a significant first step in the development of biotech plants. Now a distinguished science fellow and principal scientist at Syngenta, Chilton was honored with the 2002 Benjamin Franklin Award for Life Sciences (generally referred to as the American Nobel Prize) for her achievements in plant biotechnology.

"The first biotech plants offered insights on ways we could improve food and crops by selectively giving plants beneficial, new qualities with greater precision than traditional plant-breeding methods," Chilton said. "The discovery set the stage for a new era of discovery to improve food, feed, and fiber crop production."

In its simplest form, biotechnology is a precise process in which scientific techniques are used to develop useful and beneficial plants. It allows researchers to identify beneficial traits, such as the ability to fight pests or diseases, or provide added nutrition, and incorporate them into various plants.

For an increasing number of farmers such as Winkles, biotech crops with built-in protection against pests and disease, as well as those that are herbicide tolerant, offer an effective way to control pests, increase yields, and protect the environment.

According to the National Center for Food and Agricultural Policy, insect-resistant corn annually saves between 60 million and 70 million bushels of corn that otherwise would be lost to insects, and insect-resistant cotton has reduced annual pesticide spraying by 2.7 million pounds. Further, a study by the American Soybean Association estimates herbicide-tolerant soybeans reduce the amount of plowing farmers need to do, conserving almost 250 million tons of topsoil and saving about 234 million gallons of fuel.

Not only can biotech crops help him on his farm, Winkles said they also hold the potential to help farmers around the world to feed a population that grows by 200,000 people every day without having to plow under more land. The United Nations reports farmers will need to at least double their production during the next 25 years to feed the world's population, and research conducted by the World Bank projects biotech crops will help meet this demand with yields increasing by as much as 25 percent in developing countries.

Although biotech crops are making a significant difference in the way food is produced, by increasing yields and protecting the environment, this is just the beginning, said Chilton. Future applications of biotechnology hold tremendous potential to address additional needs.

"In the first 20 years of modern plant biotechnology, we saw the first efforts to transfer beneficial genetic material to plants, the first sequences of various plant genomes and the first commercial crops with genetic enhancements," Chilton said. "As we look at the next 20 years of plant biotechnology, we expect to see considerable advances, which will improve quality of life, from foods to pharmaceuticals to new industrial materials, bringing the benefits of biotechnology to the people of the world who need them most."

BOOST PRODUCTION IN THIN ALFALFA FIELDS

No till drill Century BMR Sorghum Sudan into your old stands of alfalfa after first cutting to boost the tonnage this summer. Century BMR is high in protein, digestibility and sugars. The BMR (Brown Mid Rib) Trait significantly increases digestibility without hurting the yield. Has potential to double the yield of thin old stands.

Makes high quality balage or haylage. Cows go for it and milk well on Century BMR. Grazers are very happy with the performance of Century BMR to fill in the "Summer Slump."

Century BMR is available exclusively from King's Agri Seeds.

Sisters Mark End Of Era Tonight In Berks County

LOU ANN GOOD
Food And Family
Features Editor

HAMBURG (Berks Co.) — Investing in a truckload of tissues to be delivered to the Berks County Dairy Pageant is one of the suggestions Kristen Gross has received.

She can't even think about bidding farewell as the county dairy princess without tearing up. Her sisters Alicia and Sandy are expected to shed just as many tears.

Tonight's pageant marks the end of an era for the Gross family. Each of the three sisters have reigned as Berks County dairy princess within the past 10 years. Kristen is the youngest.

With no more princesses in the household, the parents will no longer be able to call themselves "king" and "queen."

"King David sort of had an original ring to it," Gross said, mournful of losing his kingly position.

Although his daughters will no longer provide a title of nobility to him, it's certain they will continue to treat him royalty.

In fact, Kristen plans to attain a nursing degree so that "I can take care of dad," she said.

The three sisters say that their dad is accident-prone. In fact, within the past week, Gross broke a few ribs when he slipped off some equipment.

Kristen said she was only two years old when her dad had a major lay-up from a farm injury. While the rest of the family worked in the barn, 2-year-old Kristen fetched her bedfast dad water and other needs.

Gross recuperated, but has a reputation for odd accidents, some as the result of his previous injury in which his "one arm doesn't work properly." He explains that ag is a challenging occupation that often requires farmers to do "too much stuff on the last thread. When you are hurrying and things are not working properly, you get hurt."

Although he has broken ribs and a "bum shoulder and arms," Gross won't remain immobile long.

Tonight ends an era for these sisters. Each of the three have reigned as Berks County Dairy Princess within the past 10 years. Kristin, center, will crown her successor this evening at the Berks County Pageant, Leesport Agriculture Center. Alicia, left, reigned in 1998-1999. Sandy began her reign in 1992 and also serves as the Pennsylvania Alternate. Although the crown and banner will no longer be part of their attire, the sisters will continue with their involvement in the Berks County Dairy Promotion Committee.

Sandy explained that if we tell dad to take it easy, he stops doing only one thing (of his workload duties).

It's evident that the three sisters adore their dad and he them. He said, "I believe that God gave the family to work together and appreciate each other. On the farm, one can do that better (than other occupations).

His eldest daughter said, "You can really learn to appreciate each other when one isn't there (to do a chore)."

A son Brian, 16, was at school and wasn't available for family photos for this article, but the family said he is a big help around the farm.

"Brian has this plan that we should all work free on the farm until he is old enough to take it over," his mom said.

Another son Mike is married and has a 2-year-old daughter.

"We are prepping her to become dairy princess," Alicia said. "We make sure she drinks her milk so she will have strong bones and teeth."

The 2-year-old thinks the barn is "Pop-Pops" house and the house is "Mom-Moms."

Mike's wife Jen fits in well with the family, they say. She looks like the sisters and is about the same size, which enables the four females to constantly be sharing clothing. Jen and the Gross family share a love for horses, horseback riding, and show horses.

A senior at Tulpenhocken High School and active in FFA, Kristen helps daily with milking if she doesn't have a dairy promotion.

Alicia works at a local retirement center and also continues helping on the farm, mostly weekends. Alicia also volunteers at a nearby therapeutic riding academy.

Sandy has a degree to teach childcare, but recently has returned to Penn State Berks Campus to attain a degree in office management while continuing a full-time job as office manager.

"Most people think 40 hours is a full-time job or going to college full-time. But when you grow up on a farm, you are used to 80 hours," Gross said of the reason Sandy is able to manage both college and a full-time job.

The family jokes that around their farm, everything is done in moderation — except work.

Mom milks both evening and morning with the help of Brian and the younger girls.

Although the three sisters are not in full-time farm careers, they believe that dairy promotion will always be part of their lives. All hold positions with the county dairy princess and promotion committee.

Their dad said, "It's hard to tell your kids to stay on the farm where they can only earn $6 a hour when they can make $20 elsewhere."

In 1963, Gross and his wife moved to the 125-acre farm from Bucks County. The parents don't foresee that they will continue milking 60 cows when the kids are gone.

"We moved to the outback— now this is getting built up around us. If the kids want to continue to farm, I don't think it will be here."

Gross and his sons participate in many tractor-pulling contests. The boys also participate in lawn mower pulls.

Because all three sisters have served as dairy princess, they know what to expect and assist with promotional duties.

Sandy said that assisting her sisters has enabled her to relive the fun things of her reign without all the responsibilities.

Although Kristen is the youngest, she is actually the one who propelled the family into the dairy princess program. Kristen wanted to be the county's Li'l Dairy Miss when she was five. Her mother was scared that she would really be upset when another 5-year-old was chosen.

But Kristen was philosophical.

Home Business Blossoms For McCreights

MICHELLE KUNJAPPU
Lancaster Farming Staff

WASHINGTON BORO (Lancaster Co.) — She went from fish to flowers. That's the way Paula McCreight describes her career move of 19 years ago.

A former fisheries biologist, McCreight quit her job "to be an at-home mom and figure out how to make some moniey," she said. Besides her prior experience working in a flower shop, "I researched what would work as cut flowers and read a lot," which added to the education she needed to start the business.

She began by selling flowers to a friend who owned a flower shop.

"It's been a real learning experience," she said. A willingness to look for, try, grow, or buy new things has helped to propel her forward in the business. "I would look at magazines and say, "why can't we grow that here?" she said.

McCreight grew up on the farm where she and her husband, Brian, raised their two boys, Owen and Tyler, and began the business.

The former dairy farm now serves as host to a flower warehouse and a greenhouse full of tulips.

Although she learned work ethic on the farm, that vocation did not teach her all of the skills she needs in the flower industry. Her husband's support and her parent's help enabled her to begin the venture.

"This business is so different from farming," she said. "It's customer driven. You're driven by your schedule — people on the phone giving orders, time limits . . . it's more demanding."

The business has greatly evolved over the years. "The original intent was to do mostly dried flowers," she said. "But we had to have more climate-controlled facilities.

The McCreights' workplace "went from the kitchen table, to the shed, to the garage," she said. "Our downstairs became the office." The couple, working out of the house and barn, and using the old milkhouse as a cooler and a tobacco shed to dry flowers, were hesitant to invest in building the facilities when fresh flower sales seemed to be growing.

"We started out with garden flowers varieties that not a lot of people had," she said. "The thing that got us into the market was having local stuff. Everybody

Paula McCreight moved into the flower business years ago to earn money as a stay-at-home mom. She and her husband, Brian, now purchase flowers, more than 300 varieties, from brokers and growers around the world to sell wholesale.

On Being a Farm Wife

Joyce Bupp

Everyone needs a change of scenery now and then.

Get out. Get away. Get rested. Get a new perspective on life.

Great advice from stress specialists. But hardly "do-able" on a farm in May.

While we are never at a loss for work, no month poses a greater "so much to do, so little time" challenge than this one. May is back-to-back, early mornings and late nights, corn planting and soybean planting, weed control application, chopping rye, chopping forage wheat and barley, chopping alfalfa haylage, sometimes trying to do a couple of those at the same time, while keeping up with all the usual barn chores.

Improved cold-tolerance in corn seems to allow that foremost grain crop around here to be planted earlier and earlier. Lots of corn acres, though, still are being planted in early May. We promptly followed ours with the soybean seeding, coupled with the inevitable all-out effort to get weed control applied before any of these seeds germinated and poked their little green sprouts up out of the ground. Because April's heat flashes helped warm the ground, our last acres of those little beige beans were sprouting almost before they hit the dirt.

So, while May's planting and harvest deadlines make a change-of-scenery getaway nearly impossible for most farmers, so much happens in such a short time outside in the fields that the scenery changes before our eyes. In fact, the view alters itself almost as fast as channel-switching when The Farmer gets to surfing with the TV remote.

Our large field adjoining the lawn, especially visible because it's the view from the kitchen window and porch, has already sported several face-lifts in recent weeks. Grazing cover regrowing from last fall turned a brilliant green early on, then one day sported uniform stripes as tillage, and then planting, equipment moved through.

Not too many days later, the green began fading to brown, with the grass cover dying down to form a mulch cover for the corn seedlings. Welcome showers and bursts of sunshine coaxed the corn babies to stretch and grow enough that almost overnight they went from scattered, germinating plants to distinctive stripes of green rows.

Farm scenery is big on stripes. Nearly everything we grow is in neat rows, of some size or shape, at least during some point in its cultivation lifespan. And, on our curving, hilly ground, even the fields of the area are laid off in contoured, conservation strips — or stripes.

Up the hill, in the other direction, contoured strips of alfalfa had no stripes, just a lush velvety carpeting of a deep green shade. Then, one day last week, the hillside of alfalfa green scenery suddenly sprouted stripes, too. Each pass of the windrower converted the leafy carpet into neat rows of forage laid out to dry. Within hours, our scenery had switched to a view of curving stripes of mown hay curing in the sunshine.

Another pass a day later with harvesting equipment and the hillside scenery went to a bland-blah-brownish shade. All the neat stripes disappeared into the gobbling front end of the chopper, leaving behind clipped fields in the somber shade of bare stems. With the blessing of a continuance of frequent showers (even brief ones are better than none) the beige-hued stems should quickly revert back to leafy green.

One of my favorite bits of scenery lies in the direction of the meadow, where the heifers graze the pasture hillside, dotting the green grass with their stark contrast of black and white, framed by fencerows. And, scattered across the view are iris blooming in pastel shades of pink, yellow, and blue, cheerful small yellow and white wildflowers dotting the roadsides, and pink waterlilies blooming on the sparkling pond surface.

But no scenery accent is more welcome than a pair of newcomers flitting across the lawn. A bluebird couple has laid claim to a birdhouse on the border fence, their blue and pink presence a delightful, first-ever surprise of the season.

If you can't get away for a change of scenery, having it right outside the window is a pleasurable alternative.

Quilt Auction Helps Hospital

EPHRATA (Lancaster Co.) — A Quilt Auction is scheduled for the 49th Annual Ephrata Community Hospital Day in the Park at the Grater Memorial Park (formerly Ephrata Park), Rt. 322 West on Saturday, June 1 from 7 a.m. to 7 p.m.

The quilt auction features more than 30 quilts and wall hangings created by many local women. Guest auctioneer, Audrey Weaver, will start the bidding at 3 p.m.

A blue-appliqued quilt, "Emma's Wreath of Roses," is this year's raffle quilt. Tickets cost $1 or six for $5.

Other highlights for the day include Duane Slaymaker, acoustical entertainer, on stage at Noon, Moonlighters (Big Band Music) from 4:30 to 6:00 pm. Entertainment is sponsored by Weaver Masonry, Inc. Meet and greet Tug McGraw, retired player for the Philadelphia Phillies, from 11:30 a.m. to 1:00 p.m., sponsored by Blue Ridge Communications and New Holland Ford Lincoln-Mercury, Toyota.

Proceeds from the event will be used to purchase a cardiology ultrasound imaging upgrade, which is part of a two-year pledge by the Auxiliary. For more information or directions, call the public relations department of the Hospital at (717) 738-3556.

Add A 'Spark' To This Year's Family Reunion

Summer is the time of the year when thoughts turn to family reunions.

You know, those family reunions that end up with the men and women sitting and talking separately in groups while the children are nearby playing a game of softball.

If you want to plan a "blue ribbon" family reunion this year, spark it up by unearthing your family's precious stories. What better place to do this than at this relaxed and fun event surrounded by family members from different generations?

Think of creating a setting for sharing family stories as a good way to gain an appreciation of the past, pride in the present family, and a rich legacy for the future.

Storytelling can serve as a form of entertainment; a way to educate about hope, survival, values, and skills; a way to transmit culture from generation to generation; and in today's world, a way to pull together mobile and disconnected family members.

One sure way to get family members involved is to plan a "family keepsake exhibit." The purpose of this activity is to help family members become aware of what keepsakes have been handed down in your family; but more importantly, it gets everyone talking and listening to the family stories.

Ask everyone, including the children, to locate a family keepsake or a favorite object that has special meaning to them. You'll need to print up 5x7-inch cards on which you have some questions such as the following:

- Name of object
- What was it used for
- Was it made or bought
- Who did it belong to
- Why is it special to you
- What do you know about the person to whom it belonged and so on.

You will need to mail the card ahead of time when you send the details of the reunion. I guarantee you that a tangible object like an old tin-type picture of a family Civil War veteran, great grandmother's rolling pin or whatever your guests consider precious will get those spontaneous stories flowing.

Don't forget to set up a few extra tables to display the keepsakes along with information cards beside them. Ask each person to share their keepsakes. A tape recorder will be a must because these anecdotes will be the beginning to a treasure of family stories.

Another family activity at the reunion is called "happenings." On individual slips of paper write down such things as the funniest (or the most embarrassing, scariest) thing that ever happened to me, my most memorable Christmas, the best summer I spent at Grandma's, my first driving experience, what it was like growing up in the Depression, my first job, or whatever you desire.

Or, may you want to ask specific family members ahead of time to share some stories such as the following:

- Grandma, how did you and Grandpa meet?
- What was it like going to a one-room school house?
- What do you remember about the family outhouse?

You'll have lots of stories that will have them rolling on the ground with this last topic. Certainly bring extra blank tapes for recording these stories.

For more information on "Celebrating Your Family Through Stories" simply email me at phl1@psu.edu or write me at Penn State Cooperative Extension, 827 Water St. Indiana, PA 15701.

I will be happy to send you a newsletter and other resources to help you better appreciate your family stories. Remember to deprive a family of its heritage is to diminish it, for it is the uniqueness of each person in a family that gives that family its strength and sense of being.

Have you ever noticed your ice cubes taste funny or have a stale smell? Ice cubes provide an active surface faster than warm ones. Food odors and other identifiable odor-causing substances, such as onion or garlic, will circulate in the air flow system of the refrigerator. This is why ice cubes stored in an open ice bin will begin to taste or smell funny.

Ice cubes should be used quickly to prevent them from becoming old and stale. If your refrigerator/freezer makes more ice than your family can use, dump the ice bin weekly so that a fresh supply of ice will always be available. If it is not dumped regularly, old stale cubes may transfer a stale musty odor to new cubes in the bin.

Since air is circulated between the refrigerator and freezer, it is important that foods in both the refrigerator and the freezer are wrapped well. Use air-tight materials that are moisture and vapor proof.

Materials to use include:

- Polyvinylidene chloride (PVDC) wrap
- Glass freezer jars with straight sides
- Rigid polyethylene freezer containers with tight fitting lids
- Wax coated freezer boxes with plastic liner
- Freezer-weight plastic bags or special freezer bags
- Bags used with "seal-a-meal" type appliances

Avoid using materials such as:

- Bread wrappers
- Waxed paper
- Wax-coated freezer wrap
- Thin, non-polyethylene plastic wrap
- Non-polyethylene plastic containers

Avoid storing foods with strong odors for long periods of time. This includes casseroles and pizza that contain onion and garlic. Storing cans in the refrigerator may give ice a metallic taste.

Hidden odor can be a significant cause of odors in the refrigerator. Always wipe up spills right away. Spills not wiped up could run down and become a source of odor. If spills are allowed to seep into the insulation, a service call may be necessary to correct the problem. Remember to clean the refrigerator and freezer sections about once a month.

Follow the "Four Cool Rules" for safely chilling foods and avoiding food spoilage which odors may penetrate into the include. The rules include:

- The Chill Factor-Refrigerate or freeze perishables, prepared foods, and leftovers within 2 hours or less. Marinate foods in the refrigerator.
- The Thaw Law-Never defrost food at room temperature. Thaw food in the refrigerator, in cold water, or in the microwave if you'll be cooking it immediately.
- Divide and Conquer-Separate large amounts of leftovers into small, shallow containers for quicker cooling in the refrigerator.
- Avoid the Pack Attack-Don't over-stuff the refrigerator. Cold air must circulate to keep food safe.

Enter Dairy Recipe Drawing

June Dairy Month is "moov-ing" into the calendar of events. That means it's time to send in your favorite recipe using dairy products for Lancaster Farming's annual dairy recipe drawing.

June Dairy Month salutes dairy farmers everywhere for their hard work in providing milk, which we so often take for granted. Lancaster Farming's annual drawing reminds us of all the wonderful dairy products available to produce culinary delights.

To enter the drawing, select your favorite recipe, which must include a substantial amount of at least one dairy product. These ingredients count as a dairy product: milk, cream, sour cream, whipped cream, butter, yogurt, buttermilk, dry milk, ice cream, and all hard and soft cheeses.

Please check your ingredients carefully. Margarine and nondairy substitutes such as frozen whipped topping do not qualify as dairy products.

Dairy recipes are needed for appetizers, soups, breads, entrees, vegetables, desserts, beverages, snacks, and salads.

Clearly print or type your recipe entry. Be sure to give accurate measurements, temperatures, times, and sizes of baking dishes to use. We reserve the right to disqualify entries if these guidelines are not followed.

With your entry, include a few paragraphs about yourself and your family. Although it is not required, a photograph of you and of your family is preferred. We and our readers love to "see" the people who send in the recipes.

Photographs will be returned if you write your name and address on the back of the picture.

Only one entry per family allowed. This contest is for adults who are at least 18-years-old. We require this because children who send in recipes often inadvertently miss measurements, ingredients or a part of the instructions.

Send your recipe, photo, and accompanying information with your complete address. If we do not have your complete mailing address, we cannot send your prize if you win.

Send entries immediately. Entries must be postmarked by June 3 to be eligible for the drawing. The state dairy princess and alternates will select the winners. Recipe entries will be printed throughout the month of June. A list of the winners will be printed in the June 29 issue.

Send entries to Lou Ann Good, Lancaster Farming Dairy Drawing, P.O. Box 609, 1 E. Main St., Ephrata, PA 17522 or e-mail to lgood.eph@lnpnews.com.

Growing And Marketing Cabbage Not Only For Sauerkraut

WOOSTER, Ohio — Knowing what varieties of cabbage make for good sauerkraut, coleslaw or other dishes is the first step in growing a product that meets production criteria and satisfies consumer preferences.

Matt Kleinhenz, an Ohio State University Extension vegetable specialist and researcher, said that quality is a leading priority in the world of growing and marketing cabbage in Ohio.

"Crop quality seems to be getting elevated to a greater position of importance every year," said Kleinhenz. "In past years we focused on yield, but now we include other indicators of crop performance that relate to the quality of fresh heads or those that will be made into kraut or slaw. Physical and chemical qualities are what more and more people in the business focus on."

Kleinhenz and his associates with the university's Ohio Agricultural Research and Development Center recently evaluated over 40 cabbage varieties to identify those that meet market characteristics and could be grown in Ohio. Results of the cabbage trials are available online at http://ohioline.osu.edu/.

Researchers analyzed both grower and buyer characteristics and found that 20 percent of varieties studied met criteria from both groups and had potential to be analyzed further by the industry.

"You have to look at factors that are important to both the grower and the buyer — yield, maturity, resistance to insects, diseases, and heat and moisture stress, as well as color, density, flavor, head size, texture and taste," said Kleinhenz. "The ideal fresh market or slaw cabbage is not the ideal kraut cabbage and vice versa."

For example, flavor is more important to fresh or slaw cabbage than to sauerkraut cabbage, since flavor is added to sauerkraut through pickling. Processors seek cabbage with high dry matter content in making sauerkraut, but cabbage that is too dry or even too wet produces undesirable texture for coleslaw. Optimal core size within the head is sought by both coleslaw and sauerkraut processors. The smaller the core, the more cabbage can be shredded.

Kleinhenz works to help strengthen the link between what buyers want and what the industry produces, in part through these types of studies and the educational programs in which they are discussed.

"What consumers prefer in their cabbage is not well documented, scientifically. What we can help do is establish what people look for in cabbage and assist the industry in delivering it," he said. "So if it's a sweet, crunchy, white cabbage or one that is a little green in color with a mild flavor that consumers want, then through our studies we can find out what steps are required to grow a product with those qualities."

Ohio is a leading producer of cabbage for fresh, slaw and kraut markets, with a total of approximately 2,000 acres harvested in the northwest and south-central regions of the state. The value of fresh market cabbage (heads sold directly to consumers) was nearly $4 million in 2000, according to the Ohio Department of Agriculture.

The value of cabbage processed for coleslaw and sauerkraut is difficult to track, but Kleinhenz speculates it could be as high as $40 million when the multiplier effect is taken into account — a basic economic concept whereby the value of a product increases as it changes hands in the production and marketing process.

Chicken With Basil Cream Sauce

May is National Pimiento Month!

It's time to try out this sweeter, milder little cousin of the bell pepper.

Christopher Columbus discovered the uniquely sweet and colorful pimiento on a voyage to the New World and took it home where it quickly became a staple in Mediterranean dishes Today, more and more American families are discovering just how easy adding something special to a meal can be.

A traditional Southern favorite tosses pimientos in with mayonnaise, a dash of hot sauce, some milk and shredded cheddar cheese to make a versatile pimiento cheese Try the Two-Minute Pimiento Cheese Spread between two slices of bread for a cool summer treat. Use it as a dip for veggies or to top crackers for a late-night snack

But don't let tradition fence you in—add pimientos to your potato salad, green bean casseroles, tacos, rice dishes and sauces. Make an omelet extraordinary or a salsa special. Add pimientos to your summer salads along with your favorite salad dressing or to bring extra color to your bread recipes, like Mexican Cornbread. The uses are as varied as your imagination (and taste buds) will allow

Two-Minute Pimiento Cheese Spread

Make Mine With Mayo!

Everything tastes better with mayonnaise–one of the most versatile foods around! Whether blended into a creamy salad, served in a delicious dip or used as the finishing touch in a sandwich, mayonnaise adds zest and flavor to just about any dish

Today's Mayonnaise: Better Than Ever

Many years ago, mayonnaise was often prepared from scratch using unpasteurized eggs which can be a source of Salmonella bacteria Homemade mayonnaise also did not contain enough salt and vinegar to counteract the growth of harmful bacteria. And so the "mayonnaise myth"—the belief that mayonnaise causes food poisoning—was born.

But with today's commercial mayonnaise products, there's no need to "hold the mayo." Commercial mayonnaise is now made with pasteurized eggs, which are heat-treated to destroy Salmonella and ensure product safety. Ingredients such as vinegar, lemon juice and salt also create an unfavorable environment for bacterial growth.

In fact, today's mayonnaise is so safe that it can even be stored at room temperature after opening. Quality—not safety—is the only reason for suggesting refrigeration

Chicken With Basil Cream Sauce

- 1/4 cup milk
- 1/4 cup dry bread crumbs
- 4 boneless skinless chicken breasts
- 3 tablespoons butter or margarine
- 1 tablespoon olive oil

Sauce:

- 1/2 cup chicken broth
- 1 cup heavy whipping cream
- 1 4-ounce jar diced pimientos, drained
- 1/2 cup grated Parmesan cheese
- 1/4 cup minced fresh basil
- 1/8 teaspoon pepper
- 1 teaspoon cornstarch

Preheat oven to 350 degrees F Place milk and bread crumbs in separate shallow bowls. Dip chicken in milk, then coat with bread crumbs. In skillet over medium heat, brown chicken on both sides in butter and olive oil. Remove and place in preheated oven to keep warm.

Add broth to skillet. Bring to a boil over medium heat and stir to loosen browned bits from pan bottom. Stir in whipping cream and pimientos, boil and stir for 1 minute. Reduce heat. Stir in Parmesan, basil and pepper and cook until heated through. Mix cornstarch with extra chicken broth and stir into skillet if needed to thicken sauce. Pour over chicken.

Yield: 4 servings

Pimiento Verde

- 4 large garlic cloves, finely chopped
- 2 bunches parsley, stems removed, finely chopped
- 1 4-ounce jar diced pimentos, drained
- 1 tablespoon capers
- 1/4 cup red wine vinegar
- 3/4 cup olive oil
- 1/4 teaspoon ground black pepper
- 1 loaf French bread, sliced

In large bowl, mix garlic, parsley, pimientos, capers and vinegar Blend thoroughly Slowly add olive oil and blend until all oil is absorbed. Season with pepper. Spoon onto toasted bread, or serve in a bowl with bread on side

Yield: About 2 cups

Creamy Potato Salad

- 5 pounds potatoes
- 2 cups mayonnaise
- 1/4 cup mustard
- 1/4 cup milk
- 8 slices bacon
- 1-1/4 cups celery, chopped
- 1 large white onion, diced
- 1 4-ounce jar diced pimientos, drained
- Salt and pepper to taste

Peel potatoes, dice into 3/4-inch cubes and boil until tender enough to pierce with a fork. Drain and allow to cool. In a small bowl, mix mayonnaise, mustard and milk and set aside. Fry bacon, drain on paper towels and crumble. In a large bowl, mix cooled potatoes, celery, onion, bacon, pimientos and mayonnaise mixture. Salt and pepper to taste.

Yield: 12 servings

Two-Minute Pimiento Cheese Spread

- 2 cups cheddar cheese, grated
- 1 4-ounce jar diced pimientos
- 1/4 cup mayonnaise
- Dash of Worcestershire
- Salt to taste
- Milk as needed

Drain pimientos and discard liquid. Combine all ingredients, except milk and mix well. Slowly add milk until desired consistency is reached Cover and refrigerate for up to two weeks. You can add additional mayo to make this even creamier

Optional Garnishes: Cooked bacon slices, lettuce, tomato

Yield. 3 cups

Mayonnaise Gets an "E" for Excellent

Mayonnaise tastes great, is amazingly versatile ... and it can even make you healthier! Research recently published in the American Journal of Clinical Nutrition found that mayonnaise and other vitamin E-rich foods can reduce the risk of death from stroke in women.

To download a copy of the Association for Dressings & Sauces' informative brochure on mayonnaise safety, log onto the Association's web site at www.dressings-sauces.org. For a printed copy, send a self-addressed, stamped envelope to Mayonnaise c/o The Association for Dressings & Sauces, 5775 Peachtree-Dunwoody Road, Building G, Suite 500, Atlanta, GA 30342.

"Contrary to popular opinion, mayonnaise and salad dressing when added to salads or sandwiches will not increase spoilage or public health hazards, but actually retard spoilage and growth of pathogenic microorganisms."

York Dairy Princess Pageant Planned

JOYCE BUPP
York Co. Correspondent

THOMASVILLE (York Co.) — Visiting elementary schools has been a key focus during the past several months for members of the York County dairy princess and promotion team.

"I talked with 600 students, from kindergarten through sixth grade, during just one day of a promotion visit to the Southern York County School District," said York County dairy princess Michelle Walker, as she recently briefed contestants for the 2002 pageant on the opportunities to boost dairy awareness that come with the crown and banner.

Walker hosted the annual planning tea for York's Dairy Princess and Promotion program at her family's Walk-Le Farm. The annual pre-pageant gathering provides returning participants an opportunity to share their promotion experiences while explaining the program to newcomers. Special events, which Michelle and the promotion team participated in during the past year, included Christmas at the River, Brown's Orchard Market's strawberry festival, Ice Cream Day at the York County courthouse, monthly dairy bingo games at the Weiglestown Senior Center, and several area parades.

Eleven candidates will take part in the annual pageant, at 7:30 p.m. on June 8 at the York County 4-H Center. Candidates will be competing for the title of dairy princess and the opportunity to serve during the next 12 months as part of the extended dairy promotion team.

Dairy princess candidate Raechel Kilgore, 17, is the daughter of Doug and Pam Kilgore, Airville. She is a senior at Red Lion Area High School, member of the Honor Society and an FFA member with dairy showing and judging projects. Raechel is a member of the Milk and Money 4-H, was the national 4-H dairy judging champion in 2001, and now assists in coaching the junior judging team.

A member of the dairy promotion team for several years, Raechel served two years as a dairy miss and one year as a dairy ambassador. She plans to pursue an agriculture communications degree in college. As a dairy princess candidate, Raechel wants to take advantage of a variety of opportunities to boost public perception of the role and benefits of dairy foods in the diet. The Kilgore family milks 50 cows at their McCall's Ferry Farm.

Heather Baumgardner and Lisa Jones are dairy ambassador candidates and Amanda Hoover is a candidate for dairy maid.

Heather Baumgardner, 18, is the daughter of Dan and Lori Baumgardner, Dillsburg. Heather is a home-schooled graduate, working with the family's dairy herd, and studied dairy management courses at the University of Illinois, via the Internet. She will serve as a summer missionary with the Child Evangelism Fellowship, assisting full time with summer Bible school programs in the region.

As a candidate for her second year as a dairy ambassador, Heather is interested in working with her favorite age group for teaching, first through third grade students. She is considering pursuing a degree in elementary education to develop her enjoyment of teaching children into a career.

Lisa Jones, 15, is the daughter of Dennis and Patricia Greek Jones, Airville. Lisa is a sophomore student at Red Lion Area High School and active in the school's FFA chapter. She is a member of the Milk and Money 4-H dairy club and the state and national Brown Swiss Association.

Lisa will be competing in the dairy pageant for the first time, but is especially interested in promoting the positive health aspects of milk and dairy product consumption.

Amanda Hoover, 14, is the daughter of Paul and Rose Hoover, East Prospect. She is an eighth-grade student at Eastern York School and serves as track team manager. One of her 4-H projects is raising six head of market swine, along with the strawberries she raises as a member of the Berries and Bees Club.

As a previous dairy miss and dairy maid, Amanda has especially enjoyed taking part in milk promotion at area parades. She is a candidate for dairy maid and enjoys talking with people about milk at promotion events.

Candidates for dairy miss are Jelee Anstine, Amy Baumgardner, Carlyn Crowl, and Amber Thoman.

Jelee Anstine, 10, is the daughter of Lynn Hibbard and Charles Anstine, York. Jelee, a fifth-grade student at the Sinking Springs Elementary School, enjoys the trampoline and tetherball, and is a member of the Penn Laurel Girl Scouts. As a third-year dairy miss candidate, Jelee has enjoyed promoting the dairy industry at a variety of events, include riding parade floats and helping at the Ice Cream Day celebration at the York County Courthouse.

Amy Baumgardner, 11, is the daughter of Dan and Lori Baumgardner, Dillsburg. Amy, a home-schooled fifth-grader, has been part of the promotion team for four years as both a dairy miss and li'l miss. She enjoys the parades and senior centers, but especially likes doing promotions with younger children. A member of the Central Dairy Club, Amy's favorite part of exhibiting her two dairy heifers is the showmanship competition.

Carlyn Crowl, 10, is the daughter of Gary and Melanie Crowl, Delta. A fifth grader at Clearview Elementary School, Carlyn is a member of the Milk and Money dairy club and exhibits three Milking Shorthorns. Participating for her second year as a dairy miss, Carlyn assisted with the strawberry festival at Brown's Orchard Markets and took a calf to her fourth-grade as part of school dairy promotion activities.

Amber Thoman, 8, is the daughter of Gary and Gail Thoman, Dallastown. Amber is in the second grade at Loganville-Springfield Elementary School and plays soccer in the JLS league. A two-year 4-H member of the Southwest dairy club, Amber exhibits her calf at area shows. She has been a dairy miss and li'l miss for four years, and enjoys riding parade floats.

Sisters Katie and Rebekah Baumgardner are candidates for the li'l dairy miss title. They are the daughters of Dan and Lori Baumgardner, Dillsburg.

Katie, 7, is a home-schooled second grade student, who enjoys art, including painting and playing the piano. She is a rookie member of the Central dairy club and will exhibit one calf this year. As last year's li'l dairy miss, Katie's favorite promotion was riding floats in parades.

Rebekah Baumgardner, 4, is a pre-school participant in the family's home schooling studies. While not an official past member of the promotion team, "Bekah" has traveled to various events with her older sisters and likes drinking milk and eating dairy products.

Organizations interested in having the York County dairy princess or promotion team be part of their program may contact Heather Crowl (717) 862-3955, or Lori Baumgardner (717) 432-3169.

QUESTION A reader wants some diabetic bread recipes that can be made in a bread machine.

ANSWER — For the reader who wanted recipes to entice her family to eat vegetables, here are a few ideas from Vera Reid, Laramie, Wyo.

Sugar-Simple Brussel Sprouts

1 pound brussel sprouts, trimmed and cut in half lengthwise
½ cup chicken broth
1 tablespoon butter or margarine
1 bay leaf

In a large skillet bring all ingredients to a boil over medium-high heat; stir to coat sprouts with the broth. Cover and cook 8-10 minute until sprouts are barely tender and still bright green. Remove bay leaf. Makes four servings.

Zucchini and Corn Saute

2 medium zucchini, thinly-sliced, or 4-6 baby zucchini
1 medium green pepper, thinly sliced
1 medium sweet red pepper, thinly sliced
1 tablespoon vegetable oil
2 cups fresh corn or 11-ounce can niblets, drained
1 teaspoon garlic salt (optional) OR ½ teaspoon salt and one large clove garlic, minced (also optional)
½ teaspoon Italian seasoning In large skillet, saute zucchini, peppers, and Italian seasoning in oil until crisp-tender, about four minutes. Add remaining ingredients; saute 3-4 minutes, or until corn is tender.

Broccoli Salad

2 heads broccoli
1 medium onion, chopped
½ cup sunflower seeds
3-4 tablespoons sugar
½ cup raisins
3-4 Italian tomatoes, seeded and coarsely chopped (optional)
1 cup mayonnaise (this could be half yogurt or half soft tofu, pureed in blender)
4 tablespoons vinegar
1 tablespoon oil

Cut broccoli into florets; slice and add any tender stems. Steam three minute, rinse in cold water to stop cooking, and refrigerate to chill.

Combine broccoli onions, sunflower seeds, raisins, and tomatoes in a large bowl.

Mix sugar, mayonnaise, vinegar, and oil in small bowl. Add to vegetables and toss to coat.

ANSWER — For L. Wolf, Elkridge, Maryland, who requested good soup recipes, comes this recipe from Jane Brody.

Beef, Barley, and Kale Soup

1 tablespoon vegetable oil
1 pound lean beef, cut into half-inch cubes
⅔ cups chopped onion
6 cups beef broth (can use homemade or 6 cups water and 5 teaspoons beef granules)
2 cups sliced carrots
½ cup pearl barley
1 teaspoon dried thyme
10-ounce package frozen chopped kale or 21 pound fresh kale, chopped
salt to taste
8 ounces mushrooms, sliced (optional)

Heat oil in a large heavy saucepan over medium-high heat. Add beef and brown. Add onion and cook until limp. Add broth, carrots, barley, thyme, and salt. Bring to a boil, reduce heat, cover, and simmer one hour or until beef and barley are nearly tender. add kale and mushrooms and return to a boil. Reduce heat, cover, and simmer 5-10 minutes until beef, barley, and vegetables are tender.

ANSWER Here are more peach butter recipes to try:

Peach Butter

2 quarter peach pulp (about 1½ dozen medium, fully ripe peaches)
4 cups sugar

To prepare pulp, wash, scale, pit peel, and chop peaches. Cook until soft, adding only enough water to prevent sticking. Press through a sieve or food mill. Measure pulp.

To make butter, add sugar, cook until thick about 30 minutes. As mixture thickens, stir frequently to prevent sticking. Meanwhile, sterilize canning jars. Pour hot butter into jars, leaving ¼-inch headspace. Wipe jar rims and adjust lids. Process five minutes in a boiling water bath.

Peach Butter

12 cups peach pulp
6 to 8 cups sugar

Wash, scald, pit and peel ripe peaches. Cook until soft. If needed, add water to prevent sticking. Press through sieve or food mill. Measure, add sugar, boil until thick. Pour, hot into hot jars. Process pints and quarts 10 minutes in boiling water bath.

Peach Butter Spiced

Ginger, nutmeg, or other spices to suit taste may be added to peach butter just before pouring into jars.

From Franklin County Dairy Princess Barbara Reichard comes a few healthy snack ideas. She writes, "Not only are thee drinks good, but they are also good for you. With warmer weather upon us these would certainly hit the spot and refresh you and your family. Make time for your children and make this special treat with them. They'll not only get a great nutritious drink, but they will also receive the many key nutrients found in milk."

Chocoberry Milk Chiller

1 cup lowfat chocolate milk
4 tablespoons chocolate syrup (divided)
2 tablespoons raspberry syrup multi-colored sprinkles
fresh or frozen raspberries (optional garnish)

Stir two tablespoons of chocolate syrup and two tablespoons of raspberry syrup into chocolate milk and mix thoroughly. Chill mixture in freezer for five minutes.

While mixture is chilling, dip two glasses upside down into sprinkles to coat edges, if desired. Drizzle remaining chocolate syrup on inside and bottom of glasses.

Pull mixture out to the freezer. Pour into chocolate-drizzled glasses. Garnish with raspberries, if desired.

Apryl Becker reminds readers that May is Osteoporosis Awareness Month. She did a 14-page research project on the subject for her eighth grade English class.

Lancaster County Dairy Ambassador Apryl Becker, 14, is concerned that her generation is not consuming enough calcium to combat "the most debilitating bone disease known to mankind —osteoporosis."

May is Osteoporosis Awareness Month, and Apryl wants people to know that the disease can be prevented if teens consume enough calcium now.

She wrote a 14-page research paper on the subject for her eighth grade English class. She writes that usually no symptoms of the disease show up until a fracture occurs. As bones become more fragile, falls or bumps that would not hurt most people can cause fractures.

More than half a million fractures are caused annually by osteoporosis. Complications from osteoporosis ranks fourth on the list of diseases that kill women.

"Small changes today for better bones tomorrow may be more important than a person might guess," Apryl said. She recommends consuming 3-4 servings of dairy products daily and exercise as effective preventive care.

"Adolescents who make a five percent gain in bone mass can reduce the risk of osteoporosis by 40 percent," Apryl said.

Try this recipe as a start for better nutrition.

STUFFED ZUCCHINI

4 medium zucchini (about 2 pounds)
¼ cup butter
1 medium onion, chopped
4-ounce can chopped green chilies, drained
2-ounce jar diced pimientos, drained
1½ cups herb-seasoned stuffing mix
¾ cup shredded mozzarella or Monterey Jack cheese,

Heat 2 inches water (salted if desired) to boiling. Add zucchini. Heat to boiling; reduce heat. Cover and simmer 8-10 minutes or just until tender, drain. Cool slightly.

Cut each zucchini lengthwise in half. Spoon out pulp, coarsely chop. Place zucchini, cut sides up, in ungreased 9x13-inch baking dish.

Heat oven to 350 degrees. Melt butter in 10-inch skillet over medium heat. Cook onion in butter, stirring occasionally, until onion is tender. Stir in chopped pulp, chilies, pimientos and stuffing mix. Fill zucchini halves equally with stuffing mixture. Sprinkle each with about one tablespoon cheese.

Bake, uncovered, 30-35 minutes or until hot.

Ida's Notebook

Ida Risser

This is a rainy morning and a good day to stay inside. I'm glad that I trimmed around the mailbox and hoed the strawberries yesterday. The patch of berries is really free of weeds, and I hope it can be kept that way.

Just now I dread to go into my garden and I'll tell you why. Something has eaten the tops off the whole 75-feet of sugar peas. I figured it must have been a groundhog as we have several holes in the hill beside the garden. Then, the other night, our son stopped in to say that he just saw a deer beside the garden. Now I know why so many plants have completely disappeared. It is most discouraging. Will the peas bloom?

Usually I bake two or more times a week. My last batch of cookies went to a program to feed underprivileged children in Lancaster. Several Bible Study groups take turns providing meals. Whenever I have extra milk I make special desserts such as rice pudding, egg custard, or tapioca pudding.

My sister is coming from Michigan for a few days and we expect to have lunch with several other sisters. As we grow older it seems that we are more special to each other. Don't they say, "Distance makes the heart grow fonder?"

Allen is still sitting around with his cane and wishing that he could do more. As he cannot stand very well he is greatly limited in what he can do.

Our son is willing to help but with farming plus a full-time job, he has no extra hours. So, guess who tries to take up the slack and does not do too good a job.

Oregon Family Farm Days Is June 11-13

LANCASTER (Lancaster Co.) — Family Farm Days is annual tradition where people young and old alike can enjoy three free days of farm fun at Oregon Dairy, Oregon Pike, Lancaster. This year's event will be held Tuesday through Thursday, June 11 through June 13 from 11:00 a.m. to 7:00 p.m. daily.

Formerly known as "Dairy Days," the event's name changed to reflect the many aspects of Lancaster County agriculture. Guests can enjoy a tractor ride tour of Oregon Dairy's modern dairy facility; ice cream and milk samples; informative booths with agricultural facts and product demonstrations; a watershed exhibit; chick hatching and sheep shearing displays and, as always, a chicken barbecue dinner for only $2.50.

Children's activities will include pony rides at special times; a special scavenger hunt; a hay tunnel and much more.

New to this year's event is The Lancaster County Conservation District's "Conservation Expo."

Throughout all three days, attendees will have the opportunity to learn more about conservation practices, enjoy exhibits at the conservation tent, witness backyard conservation practices; and visit the soil pit illustrating a soil profile. Children will enjoy a special enviroscape exhibit and a stream study. Last year's event attracted 10,000 visitors.

Stream MAP of Pennsylvania

The STREAM MAP OF PENNSYLVANIA was completed in 1965 after a thirty-year effort by Howard Higbee, a former Penn State Professor.

The map is known as the LOST STREAM MAP to some anglers.

Professor Higbee succeeded in creating a map of the highest detail possible...a map that shows every stream and lake. He painstakingly plotted by hand the location of 45,000 miles of streams onto a 3 by 5 foot map.

The map sold extremely well--until it was lost several years later. Incredibly, the printer entrusted with the original drawing and printing plates declared bankruptcy, then carelessly hauled Higbee's 30 years of work to a landfill.

The few remaining dog-eared copies became a prized fisherman's possession. Professor Higbee was offered $400 for one of his last maps. And state agencies were forced to keep their copies under lock and key.

Experts told Professor Higbee that reprints were impossible, because the maps were printed in non-photographic blue.

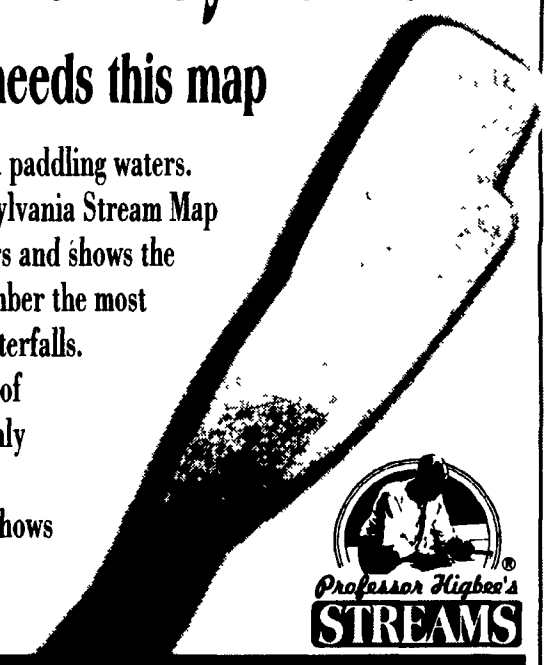
Then, in 1991, at the age of 91, Howard Higbee's dream came true. Computers made it possible to reprint the map. Howard said, "I never thought I'd live to see this day."

Why every paddler needs this map

Pennsylvania is loaded with great paddling waters. This new edition of the famous Pennsylvania Stream Map highlights navigable streams and rivers and shows the degree of difficulty (highest letter/number the most difficult), access points, dams and waterfalls.

Professor Higbee's® Stream Map of Pennsylvania is the first and only highly detailed map of its kind.

This 3-foot-by-5-foot color map shows virtually all of the 45,000 miles of Pennsylvania streams plus lakes.



RAVE REVIEWS

"It is amazingly detailed and names some creeks in the Mohawk Valley that can't even be found on topographic maps."
—John Pitarres,
OBSERVER-DISPATCH,

"If you're looking for the most definitive maps ever created depicting every single creek, river, stream, pond and lake...then "Professor Higbee's Stream Maps" are without question the finest."
—Howard Brant,
THE NEWARK STAR-LEDGER

"I spent three hours looking at it [the Stream Map]. The accuracy, it's unbelievable."
—Victor Blauch

York Dairy Princess Shaking Up Students

JOYCE BUPP
York Co. Correspondent

THOMASVILLE (York Co.) — Students at many York County elementary schools start shaking after they meet Michelle Walker.

The school students are not shaking because they are excited or frightened. They shake because the York dairy princess has them helping with her favorite school promotion activity — making butter.

"We use a print canning jar and fill it with heavy cream. I like to use the glass jar because the cream is visible. They can see the cream turning to butter," says Michelle, who has visited hundreds of children in York County elementary school classrooms since she was crowned dairy princess last June. Recently, in just one day, she and her promotion team talked with more than 600 elementary students from kindergarten to sixth grade in the Southern York County School District.

"I let the students pass the jar around and take turns shaking it while I do my dairy presentation," Michelle says. "Often the teachers help to shake the cream, too."

Michelle's talk about milk and dairy foods, with a poster and other visual aids she might use in her presentation, takes from 30 to 45 minutes, depending on how many questions she must answer. All during that time, the students in her audience are shaking, shaking, shaking the jar filled with cream.

Just about the time Michelle is finished, the butter begins to separate from the watery whey, as students watch the process in the glass jar. When both the presentation and the butter are finished, Michelle and her team of assistants pull out a box of crispy crackers and everyone has a chance to sample their freshly-made butter.

While students get fresh butter samples and milk promotion items from Michelle, she gets lots of questions from them.

"Are you a real princess?"

"Do brown cows really give chocolate milk?"

"Do you have cows?"

"How do you get to be the dairy princess?"

"Are those real diamonds in your crown?"

One little boy Michelle remembers in particular did not have a question, but an announcement which somewhat surprised the dairy princess.

"I think I'm falling in love with you," said one 4-year-old boy at a nursery school where she was visiting with a promotion talk and games for the children to play.

While the classes she speaks with usually have many students, Michelle is able to hold their attention well while she speaks and answers questions. She usually promises them that, if they listen very closely to what she is saying, there will be a surprise for each one of them at the end of her talk. Often, the surprise is a cow-shaped eraser for each student.

For a few recent visits, Michelle took along a special guest promoter. The guest was "Cassidy," a large, black-and-white stuffed cow.

Cassidy the Cow is traveling around the United States as an ambassador from the students of the Lathrop Street Elementary School in Montrose, Susquehanna County. The students adopted Cassidy to visit farms and farming areas around the country. People, like Michelle, who host the traveling cow send back to the school's students letters and photos about their area of the country, its agriculture and special items of interest.

As part of her recent stay in York County, Cassidy the Cow took part in some of princess Michelle's promotion visits. She helped to play dairy bingo with members of the Weiglestown Senior Center and participated in some elementary school promotions. Cassidy was a very popular visitor as she traveled with Michelle and the York dairy promotion team. The senior center members and school students gave Cassidy lots of hugs. She even spent a few days at Wilson College in Chambersburg, where Michelle is a student.

Michelle's reign as the York dairy princess will soon end, with only a few more weeks left in which she will be vising school students. After helping Michelle with dairy promotion, Cassidy is also moving on. She will visit first with a dairy family in Idaho and then take a long airplane flight to visit dairy friends in Hawaii.

Both dairy promoters, Michelle the princess, and Cassidy, the traveling cow, are looking forward to the next adventures in their lives.

York Dairy Princess Michelle Walker demonstrates how she shakes up classrooms during her school promotion visits. After filling a pint jar with heavy cream, Michelle keeps students busy during her presentation by shaking the jar until the cream forms butter.

"Cassidy," a traveling cow ambassador from a Susquehanna County elementary school, accompanied Michelle on some of her recent dairy promotions. With her cowhide bag of promotion materials and stuffed cow companion, Michelle heads out for her next school visit.

with Twig Walkingstick
Dear Twig: The crabapple trees in our yard are in bloom. My mother really likes them. Tell me: what's so special about crabapple trees?
Well, there's a lot that's special about crabapple trees For one thing, they're pretty in springtime They bloom in shades of red, white or pink (and coral, salmon and burgundy!) One tree alone or a whole bunch together makes for a lovely sight
Also, many types of crabapple trees look nice all year long No, they don't flower all year But they give us green leaves and shade in summer Red, brown or gold leaves in fall And red, pink or yellow fruit — crabapples — in winter Birds often eat them
Several scientists with Ohio State University, my home, study crabapple trees They want to see how different types — there are hundreds! — look, grow and respond to diseases What they learn they share with gardeners and with people who grow trees for a living
Among other things, their work helps the environment, because they've found that some types of crabapples don't need pesticides to stay healthy The trees resist diseases and don't need spraying
Want to see acres of crabapple trees? Visit Ohio State's Secrest Arboretum in Wooster It's home to one of the biggest crabapple collections in the country Bring your walkin' shoes!

NEW HOLLAND CREDIT

From Fish To Flowers: Home Business Blossoms For McCreights

loved it. It wasn't cut and then shipped for two weeks, and it wasn't crushed."

The McCreights added a wholesale warehouse with coolers in 1990. They began growing flowers in three acres of field, and at one time grew flowers in 10 acres. After two years, however, they began importing flowers, a facet of the business that grew and eventually became the business's focus. The couple became wholesale florists, importing flowers from around the world.

McCreights Wholesale Flowers now has 25-30 employees, from in-house to on-road salespeople, drives, buyers, accountants, and "pullers and packers" who pick out the proper flowers for each order.

The McCreights buy their flowers — more than 300 varieties, according to Brian — from brokers and growers around the world, then sell the blooms to retail florists. They purchase flowers by the case lots.

The flowers and greens come from South America, such as Columbia or Ecuador, Central America, California, Holland, Israel, Australia, Africa, New Zealand, Taiwan, and Hawaii.

Although directories are available, simply getting on the phone and calling has created the contacts to buy flowers, said the McCreights.

In addition to delivery, the McCreights will take special orders or handle flowers (cut or uncut) as determined by the customer. They also do special wedding orders. They are known for their specialty cut flowers and wedding work, said Paula, who describes the flowers in demand as fulfilling the "English garden" or "Martha Stewart" look. "The hard-to-get flowers," said Brian.

They consider themselves a mid-size wholesaler, moving an average of 250 cases a week. There are 20-25 bunches in each case, and anywhere from 10-25 stems per bunch, depending on variety. "The buyers take inventory every couple of days so we really know what's going on,' she said.

"There's always a tension between buying too much and buying too little."

Drivers make deliveries to stores in Kutztown, Philadelphia, Lebanon, Lancaster, Pottsville, Carlisle, and Altoona areas, besides an occasional trip to Baltimore and Annapolis. Most of the shops they deliver to are "mom-and-pop" shops, since the larger chains buy direct.

The busiest time of the year is the period before Valentine's Day and Mother's Day.

After years in the business, the McCreights have seen trends and changes in the business.

For example, when wholesalers in America began importing flowers with a "gardeny" look from Holland, it wasn't long before blooms like lisianthus, godetia, campanula, allium, hybrid delphinium, larkspur, celosia, and even zinnias, peonies, and hydrangeas became popular.

"You can see things come in and go out" she said. "It's really interesting. When we first started selling liatris, it was only imported from Holland and I thought it would go out of style." However the flower gained in popularity and has became a familiar sight in bouquets year after year.

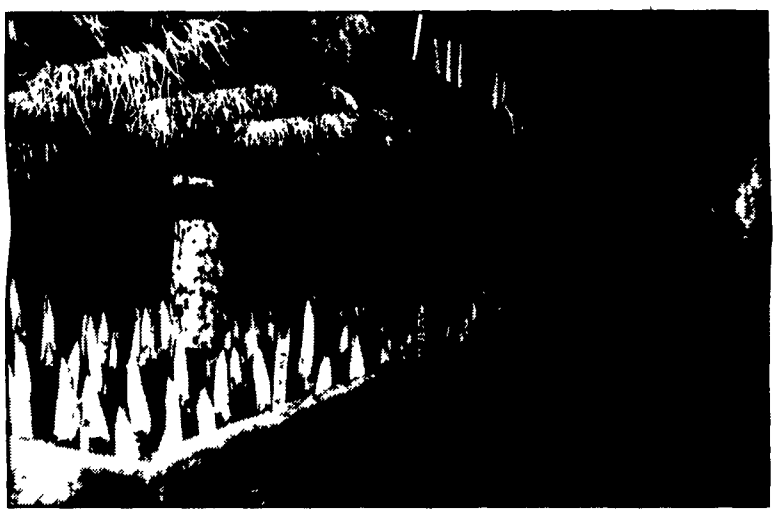
Part of a flower's staying power may lie in its availability. "Once South America starts growing something it becomes a staple because it can be provided inexpensively and almost year-round."

Availability is, in fact, key in the flower business. "The consumer is becoming more demanding," she said, noting that many customers believe that most flower varieties should be available at all times. This is, however, becoming a reachable goal.

"Every year I see an extended growing season on more and more different varieties," she said. Not only controlling inventory but also staying competitive with price are two of her biggest challenges. "People are very price-conscious," she said. As a mid-size supplier, "you can't ever kick back, you have to be ready to give good service."

After 19 years, McCreight is still a little amazed at where the business has gone. "When I think where we stood — with three acres in the field, and after 19 years — when I stop and think about it, I know that it has to be God."

Besides selling flowers wholesale, Paula McCreight also grows cockscomb in the field and tulips in a greenhouse to sell.



Shading by a long furl of paper, then later by a sheer dark curtain on the greenhouse helps them to "stretch a little. "If they are under bright sunlight they won't get as tall of stems as I want them to," she said.

McCreight buys tulips from Holland, 72,000 of them, then puts the bulbs in a cooler, where they wait for their time in the greenhouse.

David and Marilyn Gross joke that since their daughters are "princesses," that makes mom and dad "king and queen." On the serious side, Gross said that he praises God for a neat family, which also includes two sons. Gross said that God's purpose for families to work together and appreciate each other can be accomplished with more ease on the farm than elsewhere.

Sisters Mark End

She said, "That's all right, Mom. When I grow up, I will be the real princess."

She did. Kristen said that she used her dairy princess activities as a required senior project to graduate. Her teachers expressed astonishment for Kristen's ability to remain focused during school promotions when there is so much other activity going on around her.

The exposure to the pageant influenced the three sisters to continue to compete in the program. They are grateful that all three were able to hold the position of county princess.

Tonight's end to her youngest daughter's reign is both sad and rewarding, Marilyn said. "I can look back and see how each has grown and matured. And we have had so much fun."

Carr Reigns As Wyoming-Lackawanna Dairy Princess

Rebecca Carr, seated, was crowned the Wyoming-Lackawanna Dairy Princess. Surrounding her are Dairy Miss Rachel Smarkusky, Dairy Miss Autumn Henning, Alternate Dairy Princess Stacey Baker, Dairy Maid Denise Hardisky and Dairy Miss Brandy Landsiedel.

CAROLYN N. MOYER
Bradford Co. Correspondent

FACTORYVILLE (Wyoming Co.) — With smiles of joy, Rebecca Carr accepted the crown of the 2002 Wyoming-Lackawanna Dairy Princess. Named as her alternate was Stacey Baker.

Carr is the 19-year-old daughter of Paul and Patricia Carr, Lake Carey. A senior at Tunkhannock Area High School, she plans to attend the Johnson Technical School where she will study carpentry in the fall.

In her skit, Carr pulled up a rock and cast her fishing pole into the local dairy pond, where she pulled out real dairy products and explained the benefits of each.

In response to the question, "What will be your main goal to accomplish if you become this year's dairy princess?" Carr spoke of the importance of telling everyone about dairy products, especially the little kids.

Baker is the 19-year-old daughter of Elizabeth Baker, Jenningsville.

She is a senior at Tunkhannock Area High School. In her skit, Baker was in charge of packing the cooler for a camping trip. She listed the many types of dairy products and the benefits of including them in a well-balanced diet.

When Baker was asked what she would like to accomplish as a dairy princess, she responded, "My goal would be to help people understand more about the dairy industry so that they could eat healthy."

Denise Hardisky, daughter of Michael and Beverly Hardisky, will serve as a dairy maid. Rachel Smarkusky, Brandy Landsiedel and Autumn Henning will also promote the dairy industry by participating in the Dairy Miss program.

Judges Steven Van Kuren, Montrose, Ruth Milnes, LeRaysville, and Joseph Fuller, Montrose, had the task of selecting the new princess.

With the crowning of the new princess, the 2001 Wyoming-Lackawanna Dairy Princess, Bobbie Sue Adams, gave her farewell.

"The end of my reign will not be the end of my dairy promotion," said Adams. "I will continue to spread good news of the dairy industry when I am given the opportunity."

Master of ceremonies Betty Reibson reminded the group that that they have a great team, but dairy promotion is everyone's job.

Dairy Woman of the Year, Donna Brown takes that task seriously, as she is always ready to lend a hand to the dairy promotion team.

The Dairy Woman of the Year award is given annually to a resident of Wyoming or Lackawanna County to recognize and honor that individual for their contribution and dedication to our agricultural community.

Brown was raised on a dairy farm near Tunkhannock and has spent her entire life involved in agriculture in the area. She also works as a credit analyst in the Endless Mountains office of Ag Choice Farm Credit.

Central in Donna's life are her family, her friends, her faith and her commitment to agriculture, which is evident to all who meet her, according to the committee, which chose her for this honor.

"Thank you all for remembering me this evening. I feel very humble," said Brown as she accepted the award.

4-H HAPPENINGS

Cumberland County 4-H Dairy Club Meets

The Cumberland County 4-H Dairy Club met on April 8 at the Second Presbyterian Church in Carlisle at 7:30 p.m. Aaron Corman called the meeting to order, Sarah Wickard read the minutes, and Greg Hammond gave the treasurer's report. Greg Hammond led the American pledge and Kerri Wickard 4-H pledge.

Jennifer Zinn talked about the banquet that was held last month. The meeting was on farm safety, and there were no demonstrations. Refreshments were served.

A reminder, anyone wishing to become a dairy club member, must contact Kathy Walton at (717) 243-8750 or the extension office at (717) 240-6500 before May 1.

Ag Management Grants Available From USDA

UNIVERSITY PARK (Centre Co.) — Dr. Jack Watson, state program leader for ag and natural resources at Penn State, has called attention to a USDA program that allocates funds for agriculture management programs.

The funds are available to producers in Connecticut, Delaware, Maryland, Massachusetts, Nevada, New Hampshire, New Jersey, New York, Pennsylvania, Rhode Island, Utah, Vermont, West Virginia, and Wyoming.

The cost-share assistance will encourage and assist producers in the selected states to adopt natural resources conservation practices and investment strategies that will reduce or mitigate risks to their agricultural enterprises.

Examples of projects include but are not limited to: construct or improve water management structures or irrigation structures; and mitigate risks through production diversification or resource conservation practices, including soil erosion control, integrated pest management, or transition to organic farming.

Up to $10 million is expected to be available. Applications will be accepted through Sept. 30. For more information, contact Mark W. Berkland at (202) 720-1845.

Alfred State's Vet Techs Attain 100 Percent Pass Rate

ALFRED, N.Y. — Officials of the Veterinary Technology program at Alfred State College have announced that vet tech program graduates from the classes of 2000 and 2001 attained a 100 percent pass rate on the NYS Veterinary Technician Licensing exam.

Alfred State's Vet Tech program is provisionally accredited by the American Veterinary Medical Association Committee on Veterinary Technician Education (American Veterinary Medical Association, Education and Research Division, 1931 N. Meacham R., Suite 100 Schaumburg, IL 60173-4360.)

"The graduates' 100 percent pass rate was well above the national average of 80 percent," said Dr. Melvin Chambliss, professor and director of the Vet Tech program, "and it is also noteworthy that all 2000 and 2001 vet tech graduates are either employed in their field of study or have continued their education at the baccalaureate level."

Chambliss also stated that each of these students — Jennifer Brown, Almond, and Andrea Williams, Pine Bush, class of 2000, and Patrick Brennan, Great Valley; Roxanne Davis, Rochester; and Kellie Noel, Freedom, all class of 2001 — worked extremely hard during the difficult times of change and curriculum development in the Veterinary Technology Program and he salutes their efforts for a job well done.

State Government Opens Doors For 4-H Members

MILLIE BUNTING
Market Staff

HARRISBURG (Dauphin Co.) — For two days last month, more than 120 Pennsylvania 4-H members saw for themselves how state government works in Harrisburg.

4-H Capitol Days was developed as a learning experience for 4-H students to see and better understand the functions of government in the commonwealth.

The program is conducted each spring for youth who have participated in 4-H for a minimum of one year and are 15 years old as of Jan. 1 of that year. Each county can send one boy and one girl plus up to three more, depending upon the number enrolled in 4-H in the county. This year's event took place April 15-16.

Headquartered at the Hilton Harrisburg and Towers, 4-H Capitol Days is a major event. On Monday morning the students set out to visit the various state agencies and departments. They took part in simulation workshops that involved writing grant proposals for up to $100,000 and creating budgets for the agencies. They then presented their proposals to a three-person judging panel.

Touring the Capitol Building is usually enlightening for the students. Recalling her experience, one student wrote that she "especially enjoyed the capitol tour, where I realized how grand and beautiful our state capitol truly is . . . gold leafing practically everywhere and enormous, detailed murals . . . intricate stained glass windows amazed me by their size and beauty."

Tuesday morning, the 4-H'ers joined the legislators at a legislative breakfast. Later they were able to visit with the lawmakers and those who did not attend the breakfast in the capitol.

4-H Leaders Recognized

UNIVERSITY PARK (Centre Co.) — Adults and youth volunteers from across the state received congratulations for a job well done at the 2002 Pennsylvania 4-H leaders Forum recently at the Nittany Lion Inn on the Penn State University Park Campus.

Berks County's representatives included: Jacqueline Hertzog and Charles Hertzog of Birdsboro, Sandra Shorley and Linda Hausman of Boyertown.

Ted Alter, Penn State associate vice president for outreach and director or cooperative extension in the College of Agricultural Sciences, delivered the commendations at the event, which featured workshops designed to help adult and teen 4-H leaders to become better teachers and youth counselors.

"Volunteer 4-H program leaders serve as educators, mentors, positive role models and friends to thousands of young people throughout the state," says Robert Lewis, professor of agricultural and extension education and coordinator of the forum. "On average, each 4-H leader gives more than 200 hours of their time each year and makes an important impact on the lives of young children at a time when the involvement of a caring adult or peer can play a critical role in a young person's ability to make good choices in some very challenging situation. Our 4-H leaders set a wonderful example for youth."

Almost 11,000 volunteers are involved in Pennsylvania's 4-H programs. Each year, these volunteers work with nearly 125,000 rural and urban youth between eight and 19 years of age.

Workshops at the forum featured information on how leaders can involve youth members in such 4-H programs as computers, animal science, textile science, wildlife and foods.

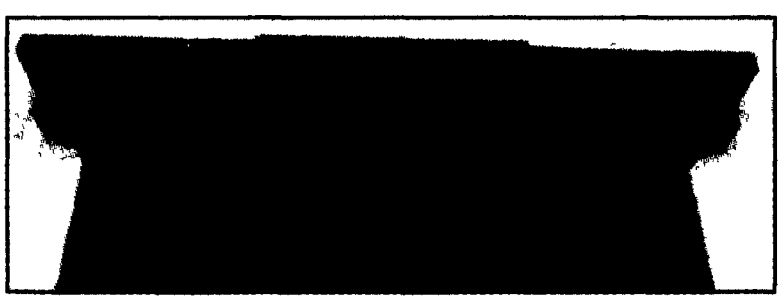
A wall display of Harmony Society tools.

This original Harmony barn was recently purchased by the Museum Society. Money for maintaining the buildings and grounds comes from grants, donations, and many fund raisers such as bake sales, car washes, and auctions.

A Harmony era doctor's office.



Harmony Society business manager Frederick Reichart Rapp carved this Virgin Sophia above the door of the museum building.

A visitor to the Harmony Museum looks carefully at a Harmony-style apple peeler on a Harmony Society built table.

Preserved Artifacts Retell History Of German Religious Settlement

LINDA WILLIAMS
Butler Co. Correspondent

HARMONY (Butler Co.) — The little village of Harmony located about 20 miles north of Cranberry is rich in history. The village history traces back to the days of the Indians and George Washington.

Washington named the then Indian settlement "Murdering town" after an incident in 1753. The 21-year-old Major Washington had set out on a mission from Williamsburg, Va. He traveled to Fort Le Beouf (near Erie) to warn the French to vacate forts established in British-claimed territory. Washington spent the night at the Indian village before resuming his journey. On Washington's return trip, a native joined them at Murthering Town. After a few miles, the Indian suddenly shot at them. Only his poor aim prevented a dramatic change in the course of history.

As settlers pushed west, Murthering town vanished. By 1800, the German vine tender turned prophet Georg Rapp had assembled a large following of pacifist separatists, many of whom were willing to accompany him to the New World to seek the religious liberty not found in Europe. Rapp left Germany in 1803 to search for a new home. The next year, Rapp purchased from Detmar Basse, a tract of several thousand acres in Western Pennsylvania. Basse, who planned to establish a medieval barony, was the founder of Zelienople, named for his daughter, Zelie.

On February 15, 1805, Rapp's followers pledged all their worldly possessions to Georg Rapp and the Harmony Society for the common good.

Five years later, the Harmonists had 2,000 acres in cultivation and 130 buildings erected, including church, school, tavern, grist mill, brewery, distillery, tannery, and others.

Under the spiritual leadership of "Father" Rapp and the business and architectural skills of his adopted son, Frederick Reichert, the Society prospered. In 1807, however, religious fervor caused the Society to adopt celibacy, a step toward it ultimate extinction.

Rapp believed sincerely that "A society can only be happy whilst every species of luxury is excluded entirely..."

Members of the Harmony Society also believed, without doubt, that the Second Coming of Christ would be at any moment. Consequently, they did not believe in preparing for the future, thus the adoption of celibacy. But, they were enormously successful at business and when Pittsburgh suffered a devastating fire in the early 1800's, the Harmony Society baled them out.

When the gigantic earthquake of New Madrid, Missouri, shook the ground as far east as Washington D.C. in 1812, the Harmony Society packed up and headed for Indiana to be nearer the fault line and what they presumed to be the Second Coming.

Members of the Harmony Society made excellent wine, which was housed in cellars similar to this one in the museum.

Ten years later, the Harmony Society returned to found Economy on the Ohio River.

The town of Harmony was advertised for sale in the Pittsburgh Mercury and Pittsburgh Gazette. It was purchased by Abraham Ziegler, a Mennonite from Lehigh County, who agreed to pay $100,000 for it. The Harmonists moved on, leaving only their buildings and a cemetery containing 100 of their dead.

Many residents of the town today are descendants of Abraham Ziegler and his principal associates.

The town of Harmony now houses a museum containing original pieces of furniture and tools from both the Harmony and the Mennonite eras.

There are several original German-Harmony style buildings, log cabins, an original Harmony barn, and a Mennonite Church which are all a part of the Museum complex.

Old homes are now visions of quaint beauty with backyards reaching to the meandering river.

A Harmony cemetery reveals that no markers were used for graves of the Society members. At this time, it is presumed that, according to records, there are 100 bodies buried in the concrete walled compound located on a picturesque hill at the edge of town.

Gravesites in the Mennonite cemetery are clearly marked revealing the many premature deaths occurring in the early 1800s. The Mennonite Church overlooks the beauty of the green valleys surrounding Harmony.

Antique and craft shops make this historic part of Pennsylvania a shopper's paradise.

Liverpool Transfer Print Jugs An Auction Surprise

When I scanned down the final prices for the February Skinner auction of American Furniture and Decorative Arts I couldn't believe my eyes. The little transfer print, Sunderland Pearlware jug that I had planned to discuss in my column had been estimated to sell for between $600 and $800 had fetched a whopping $3,290.

Thinking it was a typo I contacted Cindy Tasjian, head of Skinners' Americana department.

"The jug was just one of the many items that sold for double or triple the estimates," she said. "This was the strongest market ever in the history of the auction house Americana department."

Indeed, a Civil War patriotic quilt estimated at $8,000/$12,000 sold for $21,150; a Federal mahogany, inlaid cellarette, c.1790-1800, even with a sun faded top and imperfections that had been estimated at $1,500/$2,500 brought in $28,200.

Meanwhile, back to the transfer print jugs, You might be asking what Liverpool transfer print jugs were doing in an Americana sale!

History would tell you that the jugs, as well as bowls and plates in the same category are known as Anglo-American. From 1785 on, after the American Revolution, English potters realized there was a whole new market in America. They began using American subjects as well as others that would appeal to the American market and the ship masters who stopped in Liverpool.

The subjects were varied and included famous Americans, American historical scenes, patriotism, trade and military.

CLUES: They were made in other parts of England, but "Liveralpool" became the generic name. When the jugs have a pink lustre combined with a black transfer subject, they are Sunderland ware, enamel decoration, on one side.

Antique Detective

"The Sailor's Farewell A sailor's verse , beneath the spout within a panel and inscribed "George Henry Page Born Sept.7th 1800, Charlotte Page Born Feb. 7th 1802."

The jug had eye appeal and two names, one a sailor the other his wife, made it a commerative piece. The romantic connotation personalized it.

Historically transfer-printed decoration was used on English pottery shortly after it was discovered and patented in 1756 by John Sadler, a printer and engraver.

Legend has it that Sadler saw some children playing near his shop with broken pieces of pottery. Taking some paper prints which he had discarded, they pasted them, still wet with ink off the copper plate, onto the pottery. After studying what the children had done he began experimenting and found that when the ink was wet, by pressing a print on the jug or vase, the impression was transferred. Firing fixed it permanently.

However, others including Benjamin Franklin and Robert Hancock, an engraver from Bow, England, worked with transfer prints. Hancock introduced them to the Worcester pottery where he worked.

Since the new process was quicker and cheaper than hand decorating, potters such as Josiah Wedgwood sent quantities of their wares to Liverpool and the Sadler and Green factory for decorating.

Though thousands were originally made, they are rarities today.

Surprisingly a single example can turn up at a garage sale or estate sale, unrecognized. You could get lucky.

Animal Health Subsidiary Signs Long-Term Contract

FORT COLLINS, Colo. — Heska Corporation (Nasdaq: HSKA), a company focused on developing and commercializing innovative products for the companion animal healthcare market, announced that its Diamond Animal Health subsidiary has signed a long-term contract extension with AgriLabs, Ltd., Diamond's largest customer.

Under the terms of the new seven-year contract extension, AgriLabs' rights to exclusively market Diamond's line of bovine vaccines under AgriLabs' Titanium(R) and Master Guard(R) trademarks has been extended through 2011. Diamond has received an up-front licensing fee and other consideration to facilitate capital improvements at its Des Moines, Iowa manufacturing plant.

Diamond and AgriLabs also agreed to collaborate on the development of new products. To maintain its exclusivity, AgriLabs is required to purchase certain minimum quantities of product, which will be manufactured by Diamond in Des Moines.

"The Titanium and Master-Guard product lines, which were developed by Diamond, are the industry standard and provide broad protection from economically devastating cattle diseases," said Robert Grieve, Heska's chairman and chief executive officer. "AgriLabs is an excellent marketing partner and we are pleased with their long-term commitment to continue marketing these vaccines. In addition, we look forward to expanding our relationship through the joint development of new products that would be manufactured at Diamond and marketed by AgriLabs.

"We are extremely pleased with extending our current relationship with Diamond Animal Health and solidifying our future in the cattle vaccine marketplace," said Steve Schram, AgriLabs president and chief executive officer. "AgriLabs has been able to bring new technology to the veterinarian and cattle industry with Titanium and Master Guard vaccines. These respiratory products and others in development with Diamond will enable the cattle producers and veterinarians to remain competitive in producing safe, wholesome beef and milk products for consumers in the future."

Heska develops and markets innovative products for the large and growing companion animal health market.

Nutra-Park Announces EPA Registration Of LPE

MADISON, Wis., Nutra-Park Inc. announced that it has received U.S. Environmental Protection Agency (EPA) approval for LPE, a natural ripening enhancer and shelf life extender for use in seven specific crops including table grapes, cranberries, and tomatoes.

LPE (Lysophophatidylethanolamine) was registered with the EPA as accelerating ripening and extending shelf life of select fruits, vegetables, and cut flowers. LPE is a naturally derived phospholipid, especially abundant in egg yolk and soybeans, and is extracted from these sources for commercial use. The low dosage rates (parts per million), applied either pre- or post-harvest dependent on the crop, are environmentally friendly.

When applied to physiologically mature fruit (i.e. early stage of ripening), it stimulates and promotes ripening. LPE does not enhance respiration as much as other ripening agents. Testing has also proven that when applied to post-harvest fruit or cut flowers, LPE will reduce senescence by inhibiting some of the enzymes involved in membrane breakdown, which will then extend shelf life.

Crops approved for use of LPE by the EPA include table grapes, cranberries, tomatoes, cut flowers, strawberries, blueberries, and apples.

LPE has undergone extensive field-testing for the past three growing seasons and has demonstrated outstanding results. Dr. Timothy Peoples, director of R&D for Nutra-Park, states that LPE provides an entirely new mode of action to accelerate ripening and extend shelf life that differs from any product on the market. "LPE has effectively increased marketable yield, increased uniform color development, and improved fruit quality, depending upon the crop."

When applied to table grapes, such as Flame Seedless, Crimson and Red Globe, LPE provides growers with an increased early marketable yield and uniform color development.

In pre-harvest applications of cranberries, LPE demonstrates an increase in early marketable yield, and increased and uniform color development that results in higher anthocyanin content (also known in the market as TACY).

When applied post-harvest to mature green tomatoes, LPE will accelerate natural ripening while improving fruit quality.

"In this sense, LPE technology challenges the current thinking of linking fruit ripening and aging," said Dr. Jiwan Palta, founder and chief technology officer of Nutra-Park.

State approval for LPE is pending in all states.

AgriLabs, Ltd. is a private label marketer of veterinary vaccines and pharmaceuticals in the U.S. AgriLabs is proficient in sales, marketing, and technology transfer of current and future compounds or antigens for both food and companion animals markets.

PACD Offers Engineering Assistance In Conservation Projects

HARRISBURG (Dauphin Co.) — The Pennsylvania Association of Conservation Districts, Inc. (PACD) serves as the state link to local conservation efforts. An example of the PACD's resourcefulness and extraordinary leadership is its Engineering Assistance Program.

Last July, the association was awarded almost $1 million in "Growing Greener" funds through the Pennsylvania Department of Environmental Protection (DEP) to provide statewide engineering assistance. Within three months, the PACD hired eight new employees to implement the program. Since September, the Association's conservation engineering specialists and conservation technicians have assisted with the implementation of best management practices on dozens of sites throughout the state.

PACD's regional Engineering Assistance Teams have been involved with topographic surveys, design and specifications, technical reviews, construction quality assurance, soil investigation and numerous inventory and evaluation reports. The teams have also assisted a number of organizations with the application process for the "Growing Greener" program.

PACD credits much of the program's success to its partner, the USDA Natural Resources Conservation Service (NRCS), whose technical staff provides daily guidance to the PACD teams that are stationed at the four regional Technical Centers, located in Bloomsburg, Clarion, Somerset and Lebanon.

Aid To Conservation Districts

Engineering Assistance clients, including conservation districts, watershed organizations, and various conservation-oriented organizations, have voiced their support for the program and are pleased with the performance of the technical staff. Brian Sneeringer, agricultural conservation technician from the Adams County Conservation District, said "I hope that the program can continue this way, because the help we received has really made a difference."

Sneeringer worked closely with the PACD Conservation team stationed in Lebanon on the Markel Run Water Quality Project, which helps manage manure and milkhouse runoff affecting a tributary of Markel Run located on an Adams County farm.

"This particular project proved to be a huge success for us," Sneeringer said. "It's something I feel particularly good about because it has produced immediate effects and will have a direct impact on water quality."

The project involved the installation of a concrete storage tank, roof runoff controls and streambank fencing. PACD staff worked closely with staff from the Adams County Conservation District and the landowner during the planning stages of the project.

Variety Of Projects

The PACD Engineering Assistance Teams have dealt primarily with projects concerning agriculture, abandoned mine drainage (AMD) and stream restoration. The scope of work for each team is largely determined by the particular conditions present in their region of the state. For example, the Engineering Assistance Team stationed in Bloomsburg has assisted with abandoned mine drainage projects.

The staff has provided services on several AMD projects in Schuylkill and Northumberland counties, including a technical review of design proposals for several AMD sites located within the Shamokin Creek Watershed.

"They've always been right here to help when we've needed it," said Dennis D'Iorio, Northumberland County conservation district manager. "We're involved in a lot of AMD projects and, by reviewing site designs and evaluating the different contractors' proposals, they've been a real help."

The PACD staff stationed in Somerset recently earned praise for their efforts to assist the Shade Creek Watershed Association. They provided an inventory and evaluation, soil investigation, survey and mapping, design and specifications, in addition to construction quality assurance services during the designing phase of an anoxic limestone drain on Shingle Run in Somerset.

PACD staff has made several site visits, assisted with the bidding process and met with the contractors who will be constructing the device.

Close Working Relationship

According to Stephanie Seltzer of the Shade Creek Watershed Association, "PACD maintained a close working relationship with us throughout the project and I can say that I'm very pleased. They've gone above and beyond, and have managed to save us a considerable amount of money."

Upon completion of the project, 70 pounds of alkalinity will be added to the stream each day, and an estimated two miles of stream will be able to support a population of trout.

Perhaps what matters most about the early results of the program is that the landowners themselves appreciate the help and the quality of service. Recently, PACD staff stationed in Clarion assisted the Potter County Conservation District with the project design for a leachate collection system on a Potter County Farm. Melvin Easton, the owner and operator of the farm, is pleased with the results.

"The goal of all of this is to make the farmer comfortable with the product, and in this case he's been very happy," explained Carolyn Reidmiller, nutrient management technician from the Potter Conservation District.

PACD Program Objective

The objective of the PACD Engineering Assistance Program is to provide engineering assistance to entities developing or implementing a watershed assessment, watershed restoration plan, or watershed protection plan, while also increasing the ability of the Pennsylvania Conservation Partnership to assist with the design and implementation of "Growing Greener" projects.

Some of the specific types of technical assistance available include: inventory and evaluation of problem areas; identification of possible solutions and feasibility of solutions; preliminary cost estimates based on selected solutions; soil investigation; surveys and project design; design consultation, review, and approval; engineering advice to private consultants; quality assurance oversight (assistance and training to those doing assurance) and assistance to evaluate special conditions encountered during construction; training for conservation district staff, Resource Conservation and Development Councils (RC&D) staff, consultants, and watershed organizations in project scoping, development of solutions, and identification of data needs; and training to conservation districts, RC&D staff, consultants, and watershed organizations in the development of requests for proposals from engineering or consulting firms.

In order to be eligible for assistance, a completed application form must be submitted to the respective Technical Center, where it will be reviewed by a regional PACD Workload Advisory Team and given a priority ranking. Program information, application forms and instructions are posted on the PACD Website, www.pacd.org.

The PACD Engineering Assistance Program is funded by a "Growing Greener" Technical Assistance Grant, provided through the Pennsylvania Department of Environmental Protection (DEP). For more information on "Growing Greener" visit the DEP Website through the PA PowerPort at www.state.pa.us, or directly at www.GrowingGreener.org.

Looking for a better way to attack trench silos? Agri-Loader™ is the answer. In fact, it's the solution for all your material handling needs.

GEHL. YOUR LIVESTOCK IMPLEMENT LINE

We stock and sell Gehl Silage Mill Attachments for all your loader needs.
With a Gehl, you don't cut, just loosen!
Get a GEHL from Binkley & Hurst Bros.

Optional Attachments Available!
Cleanly shave hard-packed bunkers with Gehl silage mill attachments.

The "Bunker Buster" incorporates a spinning cylinder with a series of replaceable, mounted picks, the same tungsten-carbide picks used to mill asphalt and concrete roadways prior to resurfacing

The "Bunker Bucket's" heavy-duty pics and large capacity bucket allow silage to be shaved, scooped and transferred in minutes

CLUTCHES/GEAR REDUCTION ASSEMBLIES

Our Specialty
We stock them, stock the parts, pinions, gears, bearings, seals & gaskets, splined outputs, shafts, housing adaptors/reducers, and pilot bearing holders. With little or no changes, these new clutch/gear reduction assemblies could fit your gas or diesel engine - 50-100hp. Five different gear ratios. A valuable link between your engine and power take-off shaft equipment.

CLUTCH / 5.8:1 Planetary Gear Reduction Assemblies

For 8-30 HP Engines
Fits most — Honda, Robin, Kohler, Kawasaki, others (1-2 cyl.)

- Fits most standard crankshafts – 1", 1⅛", 1⅞"
- Aluminum Castings/Housings
- Ball & roller bearings, hardened gears

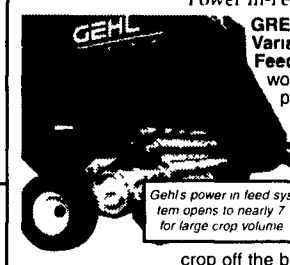
GEHL. MODEL RB 2580 ROUND BALER 4'x5'

Featuring the ALL-NEW Variable Open-Throat Power In-Feed System



GREAT BALING STARTS HERE Variable Open-Throat Power In-Feed System Here s how it works The incoming crop is pulled off the pickup by the aggressive action of two power in-feed rolls – a 6-inch-diameter pivoting power in-feed roll on top and an 8-inch diameter fixed power in-feed roll on the bottom The stripping roll strips crop off the belt and forces it down to the incoming crop Adjustable scrapers on the stripping roll and pivoting roll eliminate buildup

THREE-BALL TWINE BOX. Gehl balers are designed to keep you going all day long with six-ball twine storage They're located in full-size doors that open to provide easy access to baler components like an optional chain oiler system or the Total Density Control adjustments

GAUGE WHEELS. Allow the pickup to follow field contours while keeping tines out of the dirt That saves wear and tear on the pickup and means less dirt in your bale Gauge wheels are standard equipment with the wide pickup and an option with some others

BELTS. Deluxe balers feature chevron belts (pictured above) with heavy duty, plate-type belt lacing The belts ar e 6-1/2 inches wide for closer spacing between belts and less space between the belts and side sheets Belts are configured in a staggered pattern to minimize trash build-up

Kuhn Gyrotedders– Fluffing action that's gentle on your crop.

Wet weather is less of a threat to your valuable hay crop with Kuhn's Gyrotedder. Its gentle fluffing action speeds up hay's natural drying time.

The Gyrotedder is easy to use and gentle on your crop. Excellent ground following for quality tedding, even on difficult terrain due to the land-hugging, articulating chassis and adjustable wheels. Wheel height adjusts without the use of tools, instantly adapting rotor angle to crop density. And for the ultimate in reliability and ease-of-use, several folding models are equipped with Kuhn's exclusive Digidrive® multiple finger coupling.

This maintenance-free, positive-drive system prevents machine damage, should the PTO be engaged or the rotors raised accidentally.

Kuhn offers the largest selection of tedder sizes available with 11 models from 10' to 28' in trailed or three-point mounted versions.

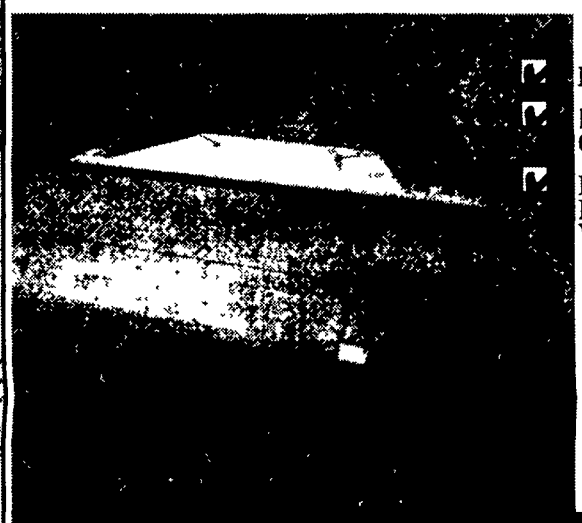
GEHL®

YOUR LIVESTOCK IMPLEMENT LINE



BETTER CUT!
BETTER CONDITIONING!
HIGHER FLUFFIER WINDROWS!

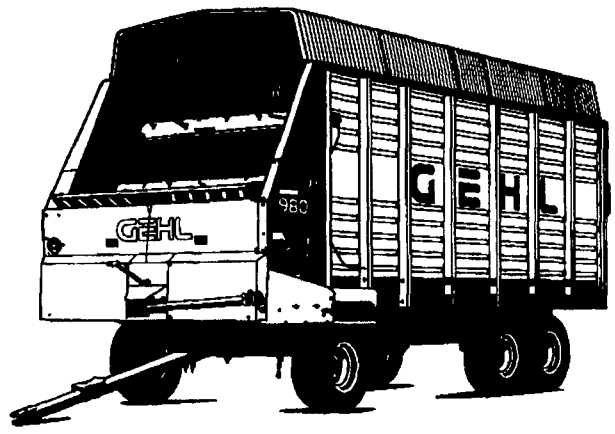
With the Simplicity You Want!

GEHL DELIVERS HIGH SPEED PERFORMANCE AND MORE RELIABILITY, TOO!

Gehl disc mower conditioners feature a simple drive system with fewer moving parts to power both the cutterbar and conditioning rolls from a single gearcase New cutterbar design delivers consistent performance in the toughest crops and conditions Full-width skid shoes and the patented Protectadrive™ system protect cutterbar gears Disc drive assemblies are individually removeable for quick servicing
Wider rolls provide more consistent conditioning while Gehl's unique forming chamber delivers fast-drying higher-standing, fluffier windrows or full-width swaths

Cash Rebates up to $1,700

YOUR BEST FORAGE BOX VALUE



Gehl's new BU980 Self-unloading forage box has been redesigned for improved performance and durability. Features include:

- True variable-speed drive for infinite unloading speeds.
- Single lever control.
- Improved beater design.
- Stronger drive chain and reinforced roof.
- Standard highway light package.
- Optional folding 18-inch conveyor extension.

JOHN DEERE

JOHN DEERE

For High-Quality, high-performance hay making, think green. Think John Deere. Technological innovations and advanced engineering come together to make the best-quality hay and forage.

Innovations such as our 6 Series MoCo cutterbar, with exclusive shearhub technology, help reduce repair costs and boost uptime. The 7 Series Round Baler offers the exclusive MegaWide™ pickup to help you form square-shouldered bales easily. And exclusive CoverEdge™ net-wrap goes over the edge of the bale to lock in nutrition and value.

Get more value in every pass, wagon, or bale. And with equipment sized to fit every operation, there's a size for yours. See us today and ask for a demonstration. And we'll show you that the best-quality hay starts and ends with John Deere!

Suzuki QuadRunner ATVs may be used by those aged 16 and older. Suzuki highly recommends that all ATV riders take a training course. We'll even pay for it. For safety and training course information, see your dealer or call the SVIA at 1-800-852-5344. ATVs can be hazardous to operate. For your safety, always wear a helmet, eye protection and protective clothing. Always avoid paved surfaces. Never ride on public roads. Never carry passengers or engage in stunt riding. Riding and alcohol or other drugs don't mix. Avoid excessive speeds. Be extra careful on difficult terrain. Along with concerned conservationists everywhere, Suzuki urges you to "TREAD LIGHTLY" on public and private land. Preserve your future riding opportunities by showing respect for the environment, local laws and the rights of others when you ride.

Cover-All...often imitated, but never duplicated, WE ARE the industry leader!

The Best Because...

Support
Our North American wide dealer network, backed by the best product support team in the industry, is committed to providing service and support long after your building is complete

Quality
At our 150,000 square foot manufacturing facility, we manufacture all of our own components – steel and fabric. Only Cover-All uses a state-of-the-art molten zinc corrosion process to finish all welds, providing a consistent corrosion barrier

Strength
Pre engineered for use across North America, our steel framework is constructed with ViperSteel™ exclusive to Cover All, and clad with Gatorshield® corrosion barrier

Solutions
Cover All offers building solutions - combining quality products with unmatched services in the industry that set us apart from the competition

"Our 40 x 80 foot Cover-All is bright enough to let me work until dark without any additional lighting. It has held up in the worst of weather, with no dripping or condensation. The Cover-All was more cost-effective than adding an additional grain bin, and I can store my equipment and farm supplies in it when not in corn. I am now planning on getting a second Cover-All for a calf raising facility."

Duane Langendorfer
New York, USA

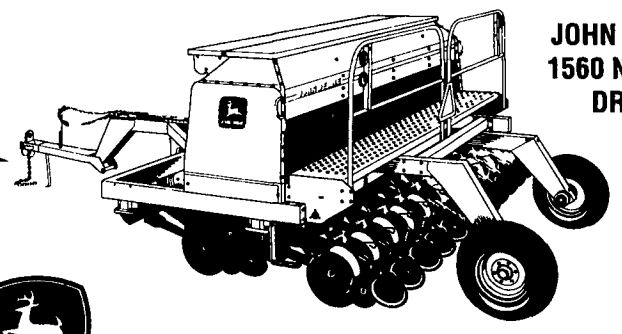
JOHN DEERE 1560 NO-TILL DRILL



NO-TILL? NO PROBLEM.

- Here's the drill that truly outperforms the lengendary 750 Drill.
- Apply as much as 450 pounds of down-force per opener for penetrating tough no-till; turn off down-force to give openers 2 inches of float for accurate depth control in mellow conditions.
- Plain-grain seedbox capacity is boosted 25 percent... now 3 1/2 bushels per foot; boxes fill evenly, empty completely.
- Grass-seed capacity has doubled (plain-grain only).
- Available in 10-, 15-, and 20-foot widths; 7 1/2 - or 10-inch spacing.

QUALITY HAY EQUIPMENT TO PRESERVE QUALITY HAY CROP

Tanco AUTOWRAP

THE WRAPPER THAT WRAPS BALES OTHERS WON'T

A Complete Range of Round, Square, and Rectangular Wrappers

Patented advantages like the unique "Deep Cradle" continuous full width belt, and fully supported turntable where four polyurethane wheels provide Tanco's reowned even and balanced operation, even with overweight and misshapen bales. Quality wrapping and quality machines that has made Tanco among the World's leading manufacturers.

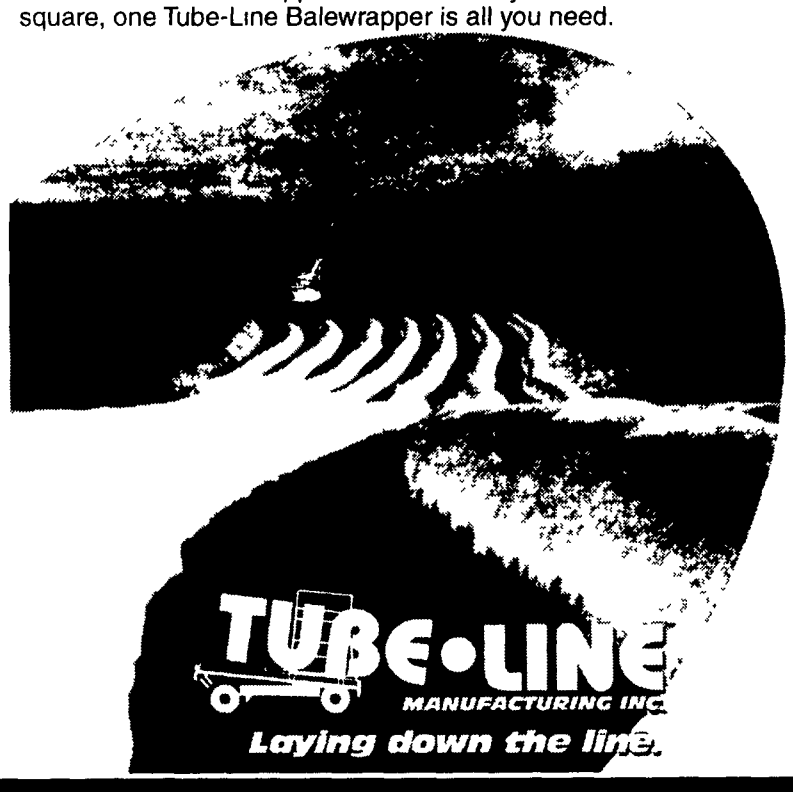
BALEWRAPPER
TL5500A TL5500S TL6500A

The Tube-Line Balewrapper gives you the power of control. Everyone knows the biggest enemies to baling hay is time and weather. The Tube-Line Balewrapper helps eliminate your dependence on the weather, saves you time and ensures you get the best quality forage.

High quality feed can now be made with a low investment in equipment. Forage is cut, wilted, baled and wrapped air tight with the Tube-Line BAlewrapper. This eliminates the 2-4 days of drying time or expensive silo equipment.

Because the Tube-Line Balewrapper wraps the bales in a continuous line, only the outside circumference of each bale is wrapped. This saves up to 40% of the film used to wrap individual bales, and saves time when unwrapping. The Tube-Line Balewrapper also gives you hydraulic control of the film overlap letting you decide how much to protect your bales.

Time is the other enemy when trying to collect forage. The Tube-Line Balewrapper will wrap up to two bales per minute. And various options are available to match the speed of wrapping to your needs. This frees up your time and allows more time for forage growth. There is a Tube-Line Balewrapper available to fit your needs. From round to square, one Tube-Line Balewrapper is all you need.



Performance

ATS Advanced Tension System
The Advanced Tension System provides a consistent 55% stretch on the film allowing the best possible seal

Hydraulic Brake Design
Tube-Line's unique hydraulic brake design allows the bales to be packed tighter together than other methods

Film Overlap Control
Tube-line's hydraulic overlap control allows you to adjust the amount of plastic overlap you decide just how much protection your bales need

Heavy Duty Construction
The Balewrapper is constructed overall to endure the challenges of field use with features such as a double reinforced hoop you will be wrapping for years to come

Treaded Hoop
The treaded hoop gives better traction to the drive wheel providing you with consistent performance

Nylon wear bars
To prolong the life of your Balewrapper, Tube-line uses nylon wear bars at critical points. This prevents pre-mature wear caused by metal to metal contact

Safety

Shut-Off
The Balewrapper can be shut down quickly from the main panel or, with the remote control option from 100 feet away

Safety Cage Interlock
The safety cages are interlocked with the automatic cycle. When the cage is open the Tube-Line will not run

Easy to use

Remote Control Steering
Operation of the Tube-Line is further simplified with the addition of the remote control option, eliminating the need to get off the tractor repeatedly

Automatic Operation
With the automatic feature, the Tube-Line can easily be operated by one person, freeing up man power for other tasks

Final Bale Push Off
Tube-Line has solved the hassle of the last bale in a row. The patented system allows the last bale to be removed safely and without damage

Set up & Towing
Unlike other wrapping systems, Tube-Line's adjustable tongue is located opposite the end the bales are wrapped, making moving and repositioning a simple task

Conifer School Is June 25-26 In Wooster

WOOSTER, Ohio — Pines, spruces, firs and their friends will take center stage at Ohio State University's Conifer School, June 25-26, on the Ohio Agricultural Research and Development Center's Wooster campus.

The program, for landscapers, nursery operators and other plant people, will take an in-depth look at evergreen and deciduous conifers, including how to identify and select them and use them in the landscape.

Also covered will be horticultural practices such as planting, pruning, and soil and pest management.

Sessions will be in Fisher Auditorium and Secrest Arboretum, an 85-acre research collection with extensive plantings of conifers and more. The speakers will be OARDC scientists, Ohio State University Extension specialists and other green-industry experts.

Ohio Department of Agriculture pesticide credits and Ohio Nursery and Landscape Association and International Society of Arboriculture certification are available for attending. Registration, which covers meals, handouts and presentations, is $185.

For more information, contact Ken Cochran, Secrest Arboretum curator, (330) 263-3761, cochran.7@osu.edu, or Charles Behnke, Lorain County office, OSU Extension, (440) 326-5859, behnke.1@osu.edu.

Feed Fast with Polar Claw® Chain

Polar Claw® chain provides high-volume delivery in frozen and hard packed silage.
Blower delivers high volumes.
Four impeller blades adjust for close tolerance and efficient blowing.
Stainless steel blower is available.
Fully automatic unloading because the 98C is self-propelled on the silage without cable support. No winch watching!
Depth-of-cut control ensures high-volume delivery.
Automatic self-leveling for uniform silage removal, saving trips up the silo.
All parts go up the chute to install easily anytime.
For 12 to 30 ft. silos.
Convenient financing from Patz Credit

4 BUILDINGS AND SUPPLIES

What's against soft paint?
In metal roofing and siding some manufacturers use soft pliable paint to prevent cracks. The disadvantage with softer paint is that it scratches so easy. Handling during erection, flying debris during storms, children playing against it, etc. can easily scratch softer paint. Scratches on softer paints tend to rust prematurely. Everlast heat forms to prevent this. Ask our competition if they heat form. It's important.

Having Problems Getting Milk Cold?

Consider a Mueller pre-cooler. It's an excellent way to lower the cost of cooling milk. It reduces milk temperature with water pumped straight out of your well. Mueller® precoolers are available in sizes to work with any system. If lower electric bills would make your life easier, call us and ask for more information on Mueller precoolers.

BEEF TIPS

"Last Year we purchased a quarter of a beef. It was a yearling Simmental bull. That was the most tender and best flavored meat that I have ever tasted. We think the Shorthorn-Simmental cross is an excellent cross."

ALFALFA SEED $1.55/Lb.
from the Dakota's Trask Family Seeds
- Features grower-to-grower direct seed sales
- S D S U tested and researched
- Distributed from Parkesburg, PA
- $1 55/per lb in 60 lb bags
- Varieties S D Common, Vernal, and Rhyzoma
- Dakota alfalfas are dormancy rated at "2" and proven to excel in winter hardiness and production!
- Trask Seed is American grown and priced to reflect no corporate monopolies!

PA farmers have great hay crops with South Dakota alfalfa seed. Painterland Farms, Westfield, PA, John Painter said "The Trask's seed grew extremely well. We recommend it to anyone. It is real leafy and yielded as well as any of the high priced name brand seeds. It cost 40% as much. We planted 294 acres. We intend to plant more this spring. It was exceptionally winter hardy and resisted frost damage. We are very pleased.

Join the numerous farmers in the PA/NY area harvesting superb alfalfa from South Dakota seed

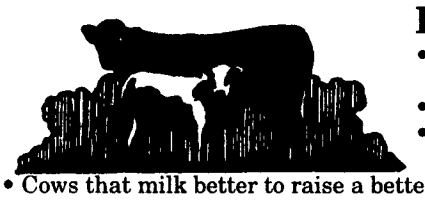
SWEETCAKE 16NU
FEED SUPPLEMENT BLOCKS FOR THE LIVESTOCK INDUSTRY
• High Natural Protein • No Urea • Fat Enhanced
• Balanced Supplementation • Safe For All Livestock Classes

Sweetcake Advantages
- Aids in making the best use of your available forage
- Promotes a more even herd consumption, with 24-hour availability to all cattle
- Reduces labor to save you money and give you more time to make important management decisions
- Supplies much-needed vitamins and minerals that forage lacks to help your cattle perform to their genetic potential
- Supplies fat in most formulations to enhance energy intake

For Dairy
- Replacement heifers that grow out soundly and economically
- Body condition on dry cows so they can return to lactation, producing at the maximum potential
- Healthier herds, with essential trace minerals that help prevent metritis, retained placenta and other health problems
- Prompt re-breeding, thanks to essential nutrients



For Beef
- Stronger, healthier calves at birth
- Heavier Calves at weaning
- Cows that cycle better for improved conception rates
- Cows that milk better to raise a better calf

- AVAILABLE IN 200 LB. SIZE -

Custom Manure Hauling

Reduced compaction provides you with healthier crops and higher yields We offer the flotation of a farm tractor & spreader or try our new truck tractor & trailer tanker. Combine the road speed of a truck (a tractor's greatest limitation) with nearly the same flotation as a tractor & spreader It will go anywhere our tractor will.

Custom Tillage

We also offer a deep tillage service if you find yourself having to do something about compacted ground. We have a 9-tooth Sunflower chisel fitted with 5 chisel teeth and 4 ripper Shanks You have the choice of 4 inch twisted shovels for good residue coverage or 2 inch straight points for less coverage. All of our customers who have had used this have been very pleased with the results.

At The Cramer Posie Patch, Flowers A Year-Long Endeavor

MICHELLE KUNJAPPU
Lancaster Farming Staff

ELIZABETHTOWN (Lancaster Co.) — The business all started with "a hobby that got out of control," said Ralph Cramer, owner of "Cramer's Posie Patch," a flower and herb farm in Elizabethtown.

began full-time with 10 acres in 1985.

Since then, the original 10 acres have increased to 53 acres. He is joined by his son, Keith, who has been working with him for 11 years and son Kevin, who develops computer graphics and the business' Website.

Although dried flowers constitute half of the operation, Cramer has also moved into wholesaling cut flowers. A farm store on the property offers dried flowers and arrangements.

His mother and father went into the dried flower business in 1965 and he followed suit in 1969 when he began growing his own flowers part-time, a job he

In the beginning, Cramer sold dried flowers to small retailer and crafters. When the dried flower market began to sag in the late '80s and early '90s, however, he began to contemplate diversification.

With the backing of experienced employees and an established reputation as a flower grower Cramer moved into the fresh flower market

MAINTAINING QUALITY IN GREENHOUSE GROWN PLANTS

Maintaining the quality of your greenhouse-grown plant materials once they approach saleable size can be as difficult as the rest of the production cycle. It does not take much to lose quality in the entire crop if you stop paying attention to any of the pro-in 1998 and has "never been sorry," he said.

Besides selling wholesale to florists, he also markets the fresh flowers to roadside stands that need the flowers either to supplement their own offerings or add another dimension to their produce stand. Trucks leave the Posie Patch twice a week to deliver flowers to Baltimore, Washington, D.C., Philadelphia, and New York.

As a marketer to wholesalers, "I don't compete with local growers," he said. "I compete with Ecuador, New Zealand, Holland, and California." These areas have access to an excellent climate or cheaper labor, or both.

"The wholesale market is tough to get into and survive," he said. Cramer sells all of his flowers with a money-back guarantee.

An offshoot of the operation is a small seed-selling business to other growers and seed companies. "My particular interest is always to find something new, something different," he said.

Besides their own unique seeds, Cramer selects and keeps an eye out for new varieties to market, such as "varieties not grown as a commercial item."

A customer recommendation, for example, led him to a plant related to smartweed, "Kiss-Me-Over-The-Garden-Gate." Also cuttings from unique varieties such as a black Pussy Willow has helped to made the business distinctive.

Four full-time, year-round workers help Cramer keep the operation running smoothly. Natalie Carter and Lena Goehring, for example, lend their help in several capacities.

"In a small company, everybody has to be versatile," said Cramer. A retail store on the premises keeps designer Diane Hershey busy year-round.

A crew of nine men from Mexico are helping Cramer to do the fieldwork. The workers came as part of a government program that brings in guest laborers. "It's hard to find American workers that want to do labor in the field," he said.

In the summer they direct-seed two acres of flowers every two weeks. "We start as early as we can in March and plant until August 1," he said. Although direct-seeding is cheap, "it is risky as opposed to transplanting," he said.

The off-season for Cramer is not really an "off season." While the winter months may be slower for a small period, there are gift and flower shows to attend — 11 shows in eight states in a little more than two months — in New York, Atlanta, and even the Philadelphia Flower Show, where the Posie Patch crew sells dried flowers and woody ornamentals.

Also in the winter months, Cramer and the employees also make plans, which includes ordering seeds (they grow 250 varieties of plants).

As for the future, Cramer hopes to "keep fine-tuning what we do," besides finding more roadside stands and wholesale florists to market the Posie Patch's flowers.

Longtime employee Natalie Carter waters sunflowers, now a staple offering among flower shops.

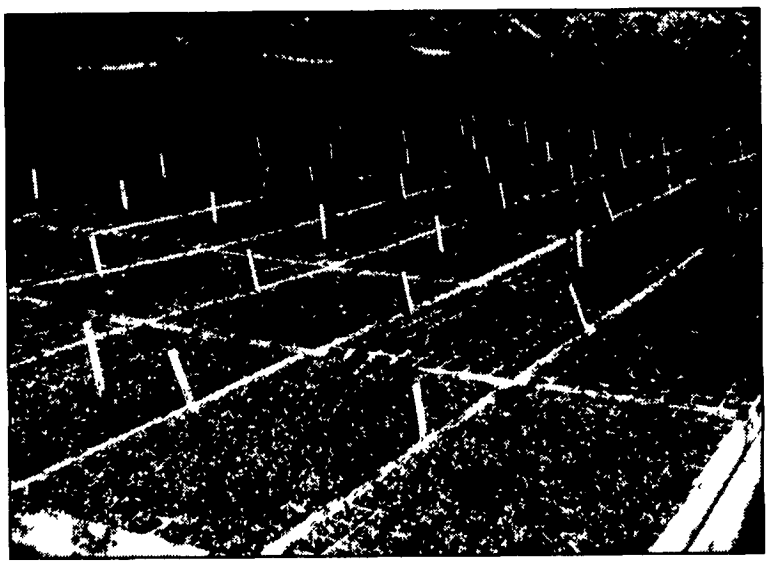
The business website is www.buydried.com and telephone number is 1-877-CRAMERS.



These sunflowers, soon to be transplanted outdoors, have become a staple in the cut flower business.

Unfortunately, as the weather warms outdoors, field preparations can sometimes result in less time spent with the greenhouse crop than is necessary.

I recently spoke with Alan Michael, the regional greenhouse specialist for Penn State Cooperative Extension here in our area, about what growers should be looking for at this time of the season. The rest of this article is a summary of his comments.

Continue to scout your crop for insects and diseases. As the weather warms, two-spotted spider mites and aphids will become more prevalent. In addition, thrips can frequently be found in newly appearing flowers. These pests will need to be controlled in order for your customers to be satisfied with their purchase.

As plants start to flower, be careful which materials you use for insect control. Some can have phytotoxic effects on delicate flowering tissue. In addition, the flowers can also be very susceptible to Botrytis (gray mold), particularly under very damp conditions. Improving air circulation can help somewhat here, but a fungicide application may be necessary under situations of high disease pressure.

You also need to be on the watch for root-rots. These diseases always seem to be lurking about and under favorable conditions can spread rapidly through a crop.

Proper plant spacing to prevent crowding is especially important now. Cramped plants will become weak, lose their lower foliage, and can be more susceptible to diseases because of poor air circulation. Plant size can be controlled with applications of growth regulators.

There are several of these products that will provide excellent size control when used properly. If you have not used growth regulators before, do some experimenting to see what concentration is needed on each of your crops.

Various types of plants respond differently to both the same concentrations of one type of growth regulator as well as the different types. It might be wise to consult another grower or your chemical supplier before you start to use growth regulators if you are inexperienced.

Applying a concentration that is too high can damage plants, while a rate that is too low will have no effect. There is no need to make the same mistakes that someone else has already made!

Once your plants reach the desired size, your fertility program should switch from a "growing" concentration to a "maintenance" one. You still need to fertilize the crop to maintain good green color on the lower leaves, but you want growth to slow down. Alan recommends fertility rates of 100 to 150 parts per million at this time. A growing rate would be in the area of 250 parts per million. Watch your plants closely for signs of iron chlorosis, particularly the susceptible crops such as trailing petunias. Even with micronutrients added to the soil, it seems that at about the 8-9 week time period these plants still are not getting a sufficient amount of iron and a chelated product should be applied at the labeled rate to correct any observed deficiencies.

Another area to watch at this later stage of crop production is the media pH. Most crops grow best at a pH of 6.2. Unfortunately, even if you start with a media that has the perfect pH, it is likely to change over the course of the crop cycle.

Lime added to the soil mix will last about six weeks (depending on the pH of your water) and then will be exhausted. If your water is basic (alkaline or sweet), then you may need to be adding acid to help keep the pH down.

High media pH can cause iron chlorosis on all crops (not just the sensitive ones) or other nutrient deficiencies. If your pH is getting too low (acidic or sour), then consider using a calcium-based fertilizer such as a 15-0-15 to have a slight neutralizing effect. A more severe situation may require the addition of liquid lime or calcium bicarbonate.

Monitoring of water pH can be done using one of the inexpensive "pencil"-type pH meters (cost is about $60), which should last about one year. Be sure to have calibrating solutions to check the accuracy of the meter at regular intervals. Generally, solutions of 4.0 and 7.0 are used for calibration checks.

Test your media pH at about two weeks after planting and then at two to three week intervals starting at week 6. To test the media pH, start by thoroughly watering the crop. Wait about an hour or so and then select a pot and add 2 to 4 ounces of distilled water to the pot and catch the runoff. Then test the pH of the runoff. If you need more runoff, just add more distilled water to the pot and catch until you have a sufficient amount for testing. Be sure to use distilled water to leach the pot or else your readings may be inaccurate.

Another device you may want to have on hand to monitor the media conditions in your crop is an electrical conductivity or EC meter. Some of these devices can be purchased that are about pen-sized (such as the pH meter) and are used to be sure that your fertilizer program is where it should be. A maintenance program (100 to 150 PPM) will read 0.75 to 1.5 on an EC meter.

A growing fertility rate will read 1.5 to 3.0, a high fertility program will read 3.0 to 5.0, and any readings over 5.0 indicate that you have damaging level of salts in your media The same water that you collect to measure pH can also be used to measure EC. These two inexpensive devices should be a part of every serious grower's standard equipment.

Hopefully you have had a good spring growing season with a minimum of crop production problems. Make notes as the season ends on things to improve for next

Stahl Family Market Thrives In Well-Populated Area

DAVE LEFEVER
Lancaster Farming Staff

LITITZ (Lancaster Co.) — Joe and Eileen Stahl and their six children run a diversified farm and produce market in northeastern Manheim Township.

In recent years, that area between Rt. 722 and Jake Landis Road has grown a lot of new houses. But from all indications, the sweet corn and other vegetables grown in the Stahl's fields will be available at the family's Harvest Lane roadside stand for years to come.

Joe Stahl was six months old when he first moved with his parents onto the farm, originally owned by his maternal grandfather. In 1979, he became a partner with his father, Jacob Stahl, in the livestock, laying hen, hay, and vegetable operation.

Joe and Eileen purchased the farm in 1995. It now features 60,000 laying hens, a beef-finishing operation, and 25 acres of produce.

The Stahl's land lies between Landis Homes to the east and the Rosemont and Wheatstone housing developments to the west. Prior to Joe and Eileen purchasing it in '95, Jacob Stahl sold the farm's development rights with the help of a township plan — a decision that helped keep the farm in the family, according to Joe.

Joe and Eileen have begun the process of turning the farm over to the next generation, with Joe already settling into an advisor role, at least in the vegetable and direct marketing business. "I'm more of a seasoned counselor," he said.

James, age 20, now manages the produce operation along his fulltime partner and fiancee, Laura Martin.

Beside tending fields and selling fresh produce this season, James and Laura will be working on plans for an October wedding.

"It's going to be a busy summer," James said.

The Stahls are beginning their sixth year selling to a growing number of customers at the Harvest Lane roadside stand along Rt. 722.

In addition to James' fulltime commitment to the farm, Cheryl, 23, Rosene, 17, Rachel, 13, Peter 9, and Melody Stahl, 5, "usually get drafted," to help with farm work, Joe said. Cheryl is also planning to be married this year.

The children have been schooled at home on the Stahl farm for the past 12 years, with Eileen serving as the main teacher.

Sweet corn grown on about 23 acres is a specialty at Harvest Lane, including white varieties Silver King, Seneca Sensation, and early-maturing Spring Snow. James hopes to have it on the stand by the last week in June.

He made the first sweet corn plantings in March under the protection of clear plastic row covers. With the jump start provided by the plastic, some of the corn was more than six inches tall by the first week of May this year.

One of the challenges of starting sweet corn under plastic is making sure it doesn't get too hot, James said. During a hot period in April, he had to poke holes in the plastic to prevent burning of the young stalks.

"It's amazing what kind of heat is inside (the plastic,)" he said.

The Stahl's grow sweet corn in double rows 22 inches apart for irrigation purposes. One line of drip irrigation serves the two tightly spaced rows. Spacing between each pair of rows makes an average row width of about 30 inches. The system also allows for effective use of a field cultivator for weed control.

Irrigation water is drawn from a well on the farm. With recent drought conditions making water levels "a little bit uncertain," drip irrigation conserves it by delivering water where it is most needed, providing "a steady flow" to irrigate three or four acres at a time, Joe said.

This Silver King sweet corn started under plastic has a significant headstart over conventionally planted corn. Photo was taken May 9.

Beside sweet corn, the Stahl's grow a variety of other produce including sugar peas, green beans, tomatoes, peppers, squash, cantaloupes, and watermelon. A small greenhouse on the farm provided some greens and spring onions to sell before Easter this year, along with flowers.

Local strawberries, flowers, and homemade jams arrived in time for Harvest Lane's full opening on the Friday before Mother's Day.

After several overcast days and chilly temperatures, opening day and Saturday were warm and clear. Sales were good, according to James.

Many customers come to the market through word of mouth or as neighbors, including those from Landis Homes and Brethren Village.

Practically all of the sweet corn and much of the produce is marketed through the roadside stand, with the remainder sold wholesale at Leola Produce Auction and Landis Homes.

Other than an occasional ad in the local paper or merchandiser, "We do very little advertising," Joe said.

He sees farming and marketing as a way to share God's goodness.

"I want to give God the glory for the opportunity and for children who are willing and capable to do this," he said.

Pot-In-Pot Method Simplifies Nursery Work

DAVE LEFEVER

STATE COLLEGE (Centre Co.) — By adopting a dual pot system for their larger plants, nursery managers can eliminate the need for expensive mechanical diggers and conserve soil, according to Penn State horticultural specialists.

"I've been telling growers for the better part of 20 years they ought to be doing it," said Larry Kuhns, professor of ornamental horticulture.

An alternative to the conventional ball-and-burlap method, this pot-in-pot technique uses two containers to hold nursery trees and larger shrubs for up to a year.

"Socket pots" inserted into the ground serve as holders for the "growing pots" containing the young trees. The roots grow in a lightweight medium, generally consisting of pine bark and peat moss.

The plastic growing pots, generally 10 to 25 gallons in size, are available with a copper-based coating on the inside to inhibit growth at the root tips and encourage root expansion within the medium. This means no roots are lost at harvest time.

The pot-in-pot method helps prevent young trees from blowing over, often a problem with nursery trees in above-ground containers. Another advantage of keeping the roots below the surface level is that the surrounding soil helps moderate winter temperatures, eliminating the need for overwintering structures to protect the plants.

A growing pot is inserted into a socket pot in the soil.

Pot-in-pot also makes a relatively easy job of moving the trees. Kuhns estimates the pots weigh about half as much as soil root balls. Harvest consists of "lifting the pot out of the ground," he said.

According to Kuhns, the biggest savings come from not needing a costly mechanical tree digger.

grape growers and winemakers in early April this year during the Pennsylvania Wine Association (PWA) Conference and annual meeting at the Nittany Lion Inn, University Park.

Labels provide only a "seven-second opportunity to garner a customer," said Wells. Making a distinct first impression and being consistent are keys to success.

The private label is the primary advertising that connects you as a winemaker to potential consumers. The labels must work on the shelf and in tasting, according to Wells.

Product label integrity is reflected by the parts of the label referring to compliance, a source of information, a broad marketing statement, and to "enhance the wine experience for the buyer, and to make the buyer feel good about his or her experience," said Wells.

The label should offer insight into a hierarchy of information about the wine. "If it's wine, make sure it looks like wine," said Wells. Also, the label should push the envelope and be innovative.

Make sure that it's the proper kind of wine and brand of wine. Limit fonts on the label to one or two. Use only one outside designer. Keep a printing archive of the label. And make wise use of "brand sets," he said.

"Be the 'logo cops,'" said Wells, "Defend those logos against arbitrary changes."

That label should reflect a love of soils, a love of craft, and a love of heritage, he said.

Soil Temperature Hot Topic For Proper Seed Germination

UNIVERSITY PARK (Centre Co.) — The sun may be out and you may be sweating like a furniture mover, but that doesn't mean it's the right time to plant your new garden.

A horticulture specialist in Penn State's College of Agricultural Sciences said the key to sprouting vegetable seeds is soil temperature.

"Seed packets or catalogs may list the minimum temperature for plant survival through a cold hardiness map," said Elsa Sanchez, assistant professor of horticulture systems management. "They may also simply list outdoor planting dates or include a statement indicating that seeds should be sown after the danger of frost has past."

Sanchez said home gardeners can start plants indoors. However, some plants do not transplant well and are better sown directly into the garden when soil temperatures are correct. Carrots are a good example of plants that do not transplant well. These seeds should be sown directly in the soil after the danger of frost has past. This information should be included on seed packets or catalogs.

"Gardeners must make sure the air temperature is high enough to prevent frost or cold injury once the plant has been transplanted," said Sanchez.

Gardeners can force soil temperatures higher by using plastic mulches. The soil can be covered with plastic. Excess soil can be placed on the edges of the plastic to secure it. Seeds or seedlings are planted through holes cut in the plastic once the soil temperature is determined to be correct using a good soil thermometer.

Plastic mulches come in a variety of colors. Depending on their color, these mulches can increase soil temperatures by either absorbing or transmitting heat. "For example, solar heat is transmitted and trapped under clear plastic, while dark mulches such as black, gray, and brown absorb heat," Sanchez said.

"You want a soil temperature at which the largest percentage of seed germinates in the shortest amount of time. Using plastic mulches can allow gardeners to plant outdoors sooner than is otherwise possible," Sanchez said.

Penn State offers the following soil temperature guidelines for seed germination of common vegetables:

Lancaster Grower Extends Growing Season With Tunnels

MICHELLE KUNJAPPU
Lancaster Farming Staff

ELIZABETHTOWN (Lancaster Co.) — Motorists who drive by the six bays of large plastic-topped hoops probably do not give them a second glance.

To Ralph Cramer, however, these poly-covered inventions are a step into a new growing and marketing strategy.

Cramer is the owner of "Cramer's Posie Patch," a flower and herb farm in Elizabethtown. Although dried flowers constitute half of the operation, Cramer has also moved into wholesaling cut flowers. A farm store on the property offers dried flowers and arrangements.

Tunnels Explained

In European terms, said Cramer, there are two kinds of crop protection systems. One hoop is considered a "French tunnel," while multiple bays are known as "Spanish tunnels."

"What makes anything a tunnel is a single layer of poly" (plastic) and in general it is manually operated and climate controlled, noted Cramer. "It extends the season by offering protection, a warmer environment, and accelerating the growth of the crop.

Cramer said, "Spanish tunnels were low and small and homemade — the originals, anyway — and the hard work was inside."

"The Haygrove Company in England designed these tunnels. The owner bought and used the Spanish tunnels for strawberries and found them to be inadequate, so he improved them. They have bigger open ends for tractors," said Cramer, which decreased the hand labor that Spanish tunnels required. Haygrove tunnels cover more ever, the largest investment comes in initial setup — especially in clay soils, according to Kuhns. In such cases, trenches for the socket pots are generally dug and lined with drainage tile.

Irrigation lines can be installed in the trenches after several inches have been backfilled.

According to Jim Sellmer, Penn State associate professor of ornamental horticulture, the pot-in-pot method is one of several options available to nursery managers, including above-ground pot and bare root methods as well as ball-and-burlap.

The pot-in-pot method helps eliminate soil compaction and keeps topsoil on the property rather than sending it out in root balls, Sellmer pointed out.

One disadvantage of the pot-in-pot system is that trees need to be watered more frequently for about two weeks after being permanently planted, according to Kuhns.

An increasing number of growers have begun to use pot-in-pot in the past five years, with more than 10 percent of the nurseries in Pennsylvania likely employing the method, Kuhns estimated.

than 1,000 acres of strawberries and red raspberries in England. The business was created in 1996 to develop and manufacture the plastic-covered tunnels.

An advertisement in a grower magazine piqued Cramer's interest two years ago during a trip to Europe. He then saw the tunnels in May a year ago in Europe and began to seriously investigate the idea. Almost a year later he has one acre under tunnel protection and is the first U.S. distributor of the product.

Customers have purchased the tunnels to grow strawberries in Pennsylvania, flowers in Oregon and Washington, lettuce in Ohio, and blueberries in Georgia. He believes Pennsylvania tomato growers would be especially interested in the tunnels, which he estimates to be half the cost of traditional hoop house.

Producers "can get in there with tractors, so it lowers operating costs," he said.

Additionally, the tunnels offer rain protection, which may be useful for growers who want to ward off moisture in certain produce crops, he said. Cramer has a machine that he takes on-site to a customer's operation. The machine bends the steel into hoops. In addition he gives a one-day construction training workshop.

The size is adjustable to each growers' needs. "They can be any length or width," he said. Cramer's tunnels are each 24 feet wide, 300 feet long, and 14 feet high in the center. The cost was approximately 55 cents a square foot, which "varies according to how a grower configures it," he said.

The steel hoops hold up the plastic while ropes hold it in place against the wind.

Because of this setup, "the vents are so high that there's less retained heat," he said. The ventilation and cooling that this offers makes a substantial temperature difference, "which makes a lot of difference for some crops."

Although the six hoops are connected, a side panel of poly will enable Cramer to close a tunnel off if it holds, for instance, flowers that need more warmth than those growing in an adjoining bay, which could be ventilated accordingly.

The legs screw into the ground. Bars with the poly attached swing closed and tie to make the doorway.

Flower Growing Season

Cramer has sunflowers, lupine, lisianthus, sweet william, saponaria, euphorbia, zinnias, and safflower transplanted and direct-seeded. The plants are watered with drip irrigation. He expects to get flowers to market two and a half to three weeks earlier than outside-grown products.

Since the greatest amount of money to be made is at the ends of a season, according to Cramer, the tunnels will quickly pay for themselves, he believes.

"Hopefully I'll be selling flowers three weeks before the competition and in the fall three weeks later," he said. The combination of row cover cloth and tunnel should offer ample warmth to extend the season. He hopes to sell flowers into mid-November.

For example Mexican Sage, which comes into full bloom in the late fall season, is often killed by frost during its peak — a problem Cramer can now alleviate with tunnel protection.

Just as plasticulture and drip tape was "a pretty new idea 20-25 years ago," said Cramer, these tunnels may become a standard in the industry in the next 20-25 years, "as more and more high-value crops come under protection."

Although the same type of setup is used in gardening areas such as California, the tunnels "haven't made it to the U.S. in a commercial way." So far five acres are covered in Haygrove Tunnels in the U.S.

In winter, since the poly is not made to support the snow load, it is moved to the side of the framework and covered with black plastic, which protects it from winter's elements and stretches the life of the plastic. "There's not much you want to heat that early anyway," he said.

Cramer has planned a field day for June 12 at 10 a.m. in Elizabethtown. Call 1-877-CRAMERS for more information or check out www.haygrove.com.

Tunnel size can be adapted to each grower's needs. Cramer's tunnels are each 24 feet wide, 300 feet long, and 14 feet high in the center.

Posie Patch owner Ralph Cramer checks the first crop of plants grown under the tunnels.

Biointensive Farming Pioneer Set To Speak In York

YORK (York Co.) — An evening talk for gardeners, farmers, and educators is scheduled for June 13 in York.

John Jeavons, author of the book "How To Grow More Vegetables, Fruits, Nuts, Berries, Grains and Other Crops Than You Ever Thought Possible On Less Land Than You Can Imagine" will share his experiences in sustainable mini-farming.

Jeavons will speak on topics such as soil fertility, food, income, and community within the context of a biointensive system of agriculture.

The free lecture is scheduled for Thursday, June 13 from 7 p.m. to 9 p.m. at the Recital Hall in York.

Greenhouse Screens Bar Whiteflies, Slash Insecticide Use

WOOSTER, Ohio — You put screens on your windows to keep out house flies. Why not do the same thing to your greenhouse for whiteflies?

That's the question a team of Israeli researchers asked, then answered, in defeating a devastating tomato disease.

The team, led by Menachem J. Berlinger of the Gilat Regional Experimental Station, found that greenhouse "insect exclusion screens" are an effective way to prevent tomato yellow leaf curl virus, or TYLCV. The screens, installed in vents and doors, keep out tobacco whiteflies, the tiny vectors of the virus.

Furthermore, an Ohio State University scientist working with the team determined that the screens are cost-effective, too — they make economic sense for producers as well as consumers — and said there's high potential for their use in the United States.

Robin Taylor of Ohio State's Department of Entomology said the screens have led to an enormous reduction in pesticide expenditures by Israeli greenhouse tomato growers and to millions of dollars in savings by Israeli consumers.

"I've seen the economics. I've seen the biology. It's a technology that makes logical sense," said Taylor, whose economic evaluation of the screens, co-authored by Berlinger and three other Israeli researchers, appeared in the journal Crop Protection.

Until the screens were widely used (starting in the mid-1990s), tobacco whiteflies were the biggest pest problem of Israeli greenhouse tomatoes. Most of the spraying that was done on the crop was done to kill whiteflies to keep them from spreading TYLCV. Yet growers still lost tomatoes and profits.

Israeli consumers, meanwhile, spent an estimated $16 million to $32 million a year more on tomatoes from 1980 to 1990 — because of lower production and higher production costs — than they would have if screens had been used.

Now, although fungicides and spot insecticides are still needed — when, say, whiteflies breach a break in a screen, usually a rare event — overall pesticide use on Israeli greenhouse tomatoes has plummeted: from a high during infestations of one or two sprays a day to one or two a season. And TYLCV no longer controls profits or prices.

"The study showed that the screening is beneficial to both the public and the producer, which is actually not very common," Taylor said. "Usually there's a winner and a loser. In this case there are two winners. The losers, if any, are the chemical companies."

The biggest winners were the early adopters: the first growers using the screens. They enjoyed about six years of better than average production, since other growers' yields were still being cut by TYLCV, and much better than average prices, since Israeli tomato demand is inelastic (it's not affected by the price) and overall production was down.

That's one of the study's main messages, Taylor said: that the early adopters of a new technology gain the most, since once the technology is widely adopted the advantage over other growers disappears.

"If you're an early adopter with the right technology, you make a killing," he said.

So will U.S. greenhouse growers — early, late or in between — adopt screening? Some already have, including in California and North Carolina.

For now, however, the tendency is to avoid the risk. Greenhouse screening isn't widely known, used or marketed here. It's also a capital cost (as opposed to pesticides, an operating cost), and for some growers, raising even the modest amount of capital needed — about $10,000 per acre — may be difficult.

Growing interest in sustainability, not to mention integrated pest management and organic farming, may change this.

"A lot of people are concerned about making agriculture sustainable," Taylor said. "One of the ways to do that is to reduce inputs, and one of the big inputs is pesticides.

"Insect pests are serious business for greenhouse growers," he said. "Screening and other strategies could virtually eliminate greenhouse insect pests and the need to use pesticides to control them."

Researchers Looking For Optimum Washing Techniques

MICHELLE KUNJAPPU
Lancaster Farming Staff

WYNDMOOR (Montgomery Co.) — Do you wash your fruit?

Do you run it under the faucet or settle for a quick wipe over your jeans before you snack on that apple?

Whatever your method of produce cleansing, food safety researchers are working to make sure the produce you purchase is cleaner and safer.

Fruits and vegetables have been the focus of a team of Agriculture Research Service (ARS) researchers at the Eastern Regional Research Center (ERRC). ARS is the USDA's chief scientific research agency.

According to senior research food technologist Gerald Sapers, although 90-99 percent of bacteria is removed with today's washing methods, only small amounts of bacteria can cause illness, especially in high-risk people such as the young, elderly, or immuno-compromised.

Additionally, even stricter requirements, such as those soon to be in place for the cider industry, are on the horizon for the fruit industry. By law, commercially-processed apple cider must undergo a pasteurization process or equivalent treatment that removes 99.999 percent of any human pathogen that might be present.

The 99.999 percent number will be written into Hazard Analysis and Critical Control Points (HACCP) plans, and will be included as recommendations by the government in the future, noted Sapers.

Pathogens such as E.coli 0157:H7 or Salmonella are two major players that the researchers are working to control with their experiments.

Contamination is mostly from fecal matter, said Sapers. Culprits are birds, deer, or livestock in a nearby pasture, since dust particles can settle on the fruit or vegetable and may contaminate the produce. Additionally, water from contaminated water sources may also carry bacteria.

Sapers is the lead scientist of a project testing sanitizing solutions and cleaning methods with a pilot plant at the ERRC in Wyndmoor.

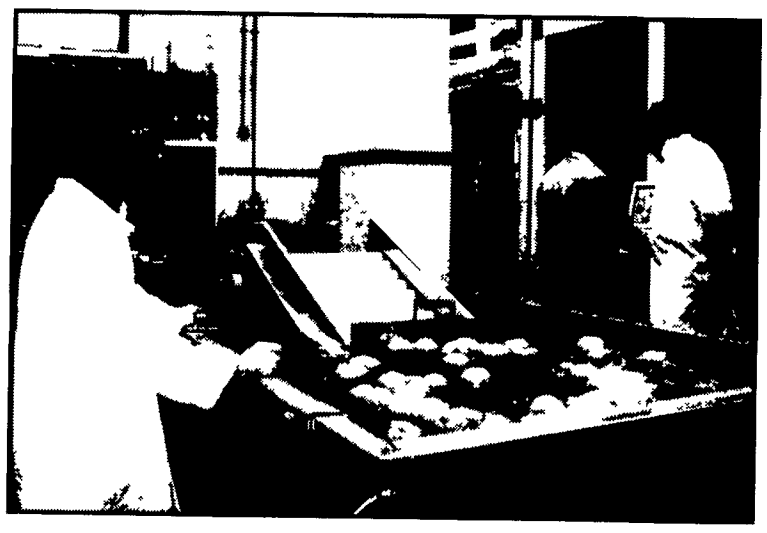
Joseph Sites, manager of the pilot plant, Andrew Cuthbert, engineering technician, and Bassam Annous, microbiologist, are also working on the fruit sanitizing project.

"Most of our research is focused on ways to kill bacteria on the surface of fruits and vegetables," said Sapers. "It's very difficult to undo contamination. Attached layers of bacteria are more difficult to remove, since they form a protective community and grow together like a glue. This biofilm is held together and attached to the produce surface by a glue-like substance. The biofilm is more resistant than loosely-attached bacteria to antiseptic sanitizing solutions applied to the fruit.

While 90 percent of the bacteria can be washed off with a superficial washing, the remaining bacteria can still be enough to make someone sick, said Sapers.

An emphasis on preventing outbreaks is a response to both the public consuming more fruits and vegetables and organizations such as the Food and Drug Administration and the Centers for Disease Control becoming more efficient at gathering, synthesizing, and disseminating

When researchers begin to work with pathogenic bacteria, they will remove the contaminated produce samples through a bath of disinfectant solution to avoid contamination of the pilot plant, as demonstrated by Joseph Sites, mechanical engineer for the project.



Andrew Cuthbert, foreground, engineering technician, observes the "dump tank" step of the sanitation process. Researchers "color code" the apples to study transfer of bacteria from contaminated apples (red) to uncontaminated apples (yellow).

"There is nothing unique or secret about researching better methods of sanitizing fruits and vegetables," said Sapers. In fact the information is public and results of studies have been presented at meetings and conventions.

Other laboratories in the U.S., along with state universities, are also working on the challenge. However what is unique at ERRC is the specially designed pilot plant.

This plant allows the research team "the ability to work with precisely controlled flow rates and exposure times, temperatures, and other treatment conditions. Most of the things that we do in the lab in beakers and flasks has to be tested on a large scale," said Sapers, " and this can be dangerous when working with pathogenic bacteria."

Gerald Sapers stands at the end of the pilot plant containment chamber, which has its own steam decontamination system.

Besides changing sanitizing agents, the pilot plant enables the researchers to adjust variables such as brushes (position, rotation, stiffness, shape), temperature, spray volume and position, and water flow. Equipment in the pilot plant is made of stainless steel, allowing researchers to use sanitizing agents stronger than conventional agents.

Dumping, Scrubbing, Spraying Produce To Cleanliness

Thus far the studies have been conducted with "surrogate" bacteria, nonpathogenic stand-ins for harmful bacteria. Eventually the researchers will move to the vacuum-sealed containment chamber of the pilot plant that will house the washing equipment. The plant decontaminates itself with a steam system, which commences after researchers complete an experiment using pathogenic bacteria.

The plant was developed under partnership between the ARS and Penn State University, which designed and fabricated the equipment.

The first part of the sanitizing process includes a dump tank, where the produce is immersed in a solution, usually chlorine. The fruit is then moved via conveyer to a brush washer, then a dip tank, where it is completely immersed in solution. Most commercial processors use a combination of the three steps, however this may vary since "every commodity has to be handled a little differently," he said.

"We have to look at other factors," said Sapers. "It's not just killing bacteria. We also have to look at the quality of the end product as well as the efficacy of the treatment."

For example researchers abandoned a treatment that killed bacteria but left unappealing brown spots on the produce.

An efficient treatment may not only improve public health but also improve the shelf life of the produce. Since bacteria is killed, the produce will not decay as quickly.

"We have done a lot of work with hydrogen peroxide as a sanitizing agent, applied to produce using a broad range of concentrations and temperatures higher than others might have considered to reduce bacterial populations without damaging the product," he said.

Other research projects include applying treatment under a vacuum, which ensures that every indent or crack of the produce is sanitized.

Additionally, chlorine dioxide gas, normally applied as a solution, has shown promising results and is under study.

Westmoreland CSA, Farmer's Market Meeting Set

GREENSBURG (Westmoreland Co.) — Producers and beginning farmers who want to learn how to increase sales through farmer's markets and Community Supported Agriculture (CSA) are invited to attend a meeting sponsored by Pennsylvania Farm Link at Paul Sarver's farm on June 19 from 7 to 9:30 p.m.

Sarver will explain the gradual expansion of his farming business from 1.6 acres to its current eight acres in organic produce and pastured poultry.

Starting with sales at farmers markets, Sarver will explain his retail and wholesale strategies. He will describe growing transplants in the greenhouse, how he grew the business, farming practices, and his interest in working with and encouraging youth in agriculture. He will also provide a tour of the farm.

CSA, or subscription farming, is essentially grower contracting and can be applied to any type of farm. The producer "contracts" with the consumer to provide a specific type of product during a specific time period and with a specific delivery date. Sarver will describe how he started his CSA and will provide information for participants on how to start a CSA in their own communities.

Information on marketing trends and ways to direct market will be included. Marion Bowlan, Farm Link director, will explain how to do market research and give tips on developing a marketing plan.

Directions: Take the Pennsylvania Turnpike to the New Stanton exit. Take Route 66 north to Exit 6. Turn left at the exit. Go to Dairy Queen and turn right. After a "dogleg" bend in the road, the Sarver farmstead is the second brick house on the right.

Please contact Pennsylvania Farm Link at (717) 664-7077 by June 17 to let them know of your planned attendance at this free marketing meeting and for additional information on other events.

Growers Learn New Pruning Methods At Franklin County Field Day

DAVE LEFEVER
Lancaster Farming Staff

WAYNESBORO (Franklin Co.) — For tree fruit growers, pruning can be as much of an art as a science.

While accepting some general pruning guidelines, seasoned experts usually combine them with their own unique approach to the job.

"If you put 50 horticulturalists together (for a pruning demonstration), the trees would not look the same," said Rob Crassweller of Penn State's horticulture department.

Penn State plant pathologist Jim Travis points out canker on a peach tree. Pruning helps to prevent this fungal disese by increasing sunlight and air exposure to the branches. The Kauffman peach trees have few problems with canker.

Crassweller joined local fruit growers for a March hands-on pruning field day at the Paul Hess farm north of Waynesboro. About 20 people participated in the workshop, featuring Gala apple and Baby Gold peach trees.

Crassweller demonstrated an apple tree pruning technique relatively new to the region. Called the "vertical axe" or "French axe," the goal is to simplify and reduce the amount of labor involved in pruning.

One of the principles of this method is to avoid cutting off the top of the tree — the central leader — in favor of letting it "go its natural way," Crassweller said. Traditionally, apple growers have topped the central leader to limit its growth and invigorate lateral growth. But that makes for more pruning work in subsequent years to thin out new shoots that grow as a result of the cut.

"Once you make that cut, you always have to fight (the increased number of shoots)," Crassweller said. A top cut might result in three new shoots the following year and increase to six or seven shoots the year after, he noted.

Rob Crassweller of the Penn State Horticulture Department demonstrates pruning on a Baby Gold peach tree. Paul Hess of Paul's Country's Market is in the background.

In the French axe method, the weight and numbers of fruit growing on the central leader serve to limit its upward growth and encourage lateral branching.

Another characteristic of the French axe method is that larger branches are pruned

Choose The Best Fertilizer For Humus

NORCROSS, Ga. — Some claim that commercial fertilizers degrade soil humus.

Among the many myths that pervade society's attitudes about modern agriculture, it's a common misconception. A case in point is a recent international report that attributed the lack of humus in soils to "heavy reliance on chemical fertilizers, rather than on traditional fertilizers and soil amendments, such as manure and compost." This perceived lack of humus was portrayed as causing continued erosion of soil from agricultural land.

Humus is good, and erosion is bad — there is no argument. Crop producers and advisers have long recognized that humus contributes to soil structure, that erosion of topsoil decimates soil productivity, and that well-structured soil reduces erosion. But is it true that fertilizers need to be organic in order to maintain humus?

Humus is made up of organic matter that has been transformed and stabilized by the activity of soil organisms. Carbon dominates its composition. But several additional elements form part of its structure, too. Nitrogen is the most important of them. Soils from a wide range of geography contain the same ratio of carbon to nitrogen in humus — about 10 parts to one.

The amount of humus in a soil is determined by organic matter added, balanced against the processes of decay that break it down. Soils receive additions mainly from plants growing on them, in the form of compounds exuded from roots, and residues left in the field following harvest. Manures and composts provide organic matter as well, but their supply is limited, as their ultimate source is from plants that have grown on land elsewhere.

As soil organisms — earthworms, insects, fungi and bacteria — decompose organic matter, they release about two-thirds of the carbon to the air as carbon dioxide, retaining the remaining third within their bodies. In contrast, most of the nitrogen stays in the system directly incorporated into the body proteins of the organisms or released to the soil for use by growing plants.

Soil organisms die, and other organisms decompose their bodies in turn. In the process, they release more carbon, but combine some of it with nitrogen to transform it into stabilized humus, with a carbon-to-nitrogen ratio of 10 to one. With less nitrogen, less of the organic matter stabilizes, and less humus accumulates.

Some growers add nitrogen to speed the decay of crop residues. Doesn't that mean it speeds the breakdown of humus, too? Research in Ontario showed no difference in the amount of native humus between fertilized and unfertilized plots of corn after 30 years. However, the fertilized plot had accumulated 80 percent more humus from corn. Nitrogen speeds the decay of fresh organic matter with high ratios of carbon to nitrogen, but not humus. When the native soils of North America were first cropped, the nitrogen released from the breakdown of humus supplied the crop. But today's higher yields, combined with conservation tillage that slows decomposition, have stabilized or increased humus levels in many soils. Since humus is no longer declining, it's no longer a net supplier of nitrogen.

Inorganic nutrients, including nitrogen, phosphorus and potassium, contribute to organic matter additions by enhancing crop growth. When these nutrients limit yields, the smaller return of crop residue to the soil results in less accumulation of humus.

Inorganic fertilizers play an important role in the soil's cycling of organic matter. Using them to maximize the growth of crops, the primary producers of organic matter, sustains humus.

For more information, contact Dr. Tom Bruulsema, Eastern Canada and Northeast U.S. Director, PPI, 18 Maplewood Drive, Guelph, Ontario N1G1L8, Canada, (519) 821-5519 or e-mail tbruulsema@ppi-ppic.org.

An apple tree pruned in the "pure" French axe method will have no branches "older than three or four years," Crassweller said.

To be successful with the new method, however, apple growers do not need to apply it in its "pure" form. They can adapt or combine it with more conventional techniques to suit their own needs, Crassweller pointed out.

"It's up to the individual," he said. The best technique also depends somewhat on the variety and spacing of the trees. Unlike apples, peach trees are generally pruned in an "open center" form with more top cuts on major branches to stimulate growth while limiting the height of the tree for ease of harvesting.

Part of the reason for the difference in pruning methods is that peaches bear fruit on one-year-old growth, while apple trees bear on wood two years of age or older, Crassweller said.

Another factor: For peach trees, no dwarfing rootstocks are available to limit tree size. Many apple varieties, however, are grown on dwarfed trees that allow for easier picking.

The basic purpose of any kind of orchard pruning is to allow the trees to make the most efficient use of the sun's energy to produce high yields of quality fruit, according to Crassweller.

"The tree is trying to farm sunlight," he said.

Selective cutting of shoots and branches allows both sunlight and air to reach fruit-bearing areas on the tree. This also makes for a healthier tree by reducing the chance of diseases that thrive best in moist, shady conditions.

Much of the pruning work in the region takes place in late winter and early spring. According to Crassweller, timing is most crucial for peaches, which can suffer from winter injuries if pruned too early. For most peach varieties, pruning is best done during March and April.

Apples can generally be pruned any time of the year without risk to the tree, Crasseller said. However, most orchardists prefer pruning during the dormant period from January through March, with some pruning during November and December.

Jim Travis of Penn State's plant pathology department was also on hand to point out a few cases of canker, a fungal disease which affects peach trees.

Winter injury from early pruning can be one factor that allows canker to grow. Sunlight and air exposure aided by proper pruning helps to prevent such diseases, Travis said.

About 100 acres of apples and 50 acres of peaches grow on the Hess farm.

Paul Hess, along with his brother-in-law Alfred Brubaker and their families, manage the operation. A portion of the fruit, along with vegetables grown on the farm, are sold on site at Paul's Country Market.

Agriculture Secretary Announces Members Of New Wine Marketing Board

HARRISBURG (Dauphin Co.) — Agriculture Secretary Sam Hayes announced that eight commonwealth wine producers have been appointed to the newly created Pennsylvania Wine Marketing and Research Board.

Last year in a statewide referendum, Pennsylvania's wine producers voted overwhelming to create the first-ever board, which will provide funds for wine and wine-grape research and support the promotion and marketing of Pennsylvania wines.

"Few people realize that Pennsylvania is among the Top 5 states for grape production, and a great state for wine production," Hayes said. "As a commonwealth, we want to be even more supportive of our wine producers and wine-grape growers, and this eight-member board enables us to be more helpful in the areas of research, promotion, and marketing."

The eight wine producers on the Wine Marketing and Research Board are Robert Mazza, Mazza Vineyards, Erie County; Donald Chapman, Brookmere Vineyards, Mifflin County; Dominic Strohlein, Big Creek Vineyard, Monroe County; Eric Miller, Chaddsford Winery, Chester County; Doug Moorehead, Presque Isle Wine Cellars, Erie County; John Landis, Vynecrest Winery, Lehigh County; John Kramb, Adams Co/ Hiwasse, Adams County; and Joseph Maxian, Sand Castle Winery, Bucks County.

Each designee is appointed to the board for a predetermined term. Mazza, Chapman, and Strohlein will serve three-year terms; Miller, Moorehead, and Landis will fill two-year terms; and Kramb and Maxian will serve one-year terms. All successors will then serve three-year terms.

Pennsylvania has more than 70 wineries. Sixty-seven wineries are licensed members of the state wine association, and several others are in the process of being licensed.

Approximately 14,000 acres of grapes make Pennsylvania an excellent contender for national and international competition. Pennsylvania ranks fifth in the nation for grape production, including juice grapes.

The commonwealth is home of the two highest elevation vineyards east of the Rockies.

"Our moderate climate and rolling terrain provide local growers with an opportunity to produce wine in delicious varieties," Hayes said. "Without question, the industry will benefit from a Wine Marketing and Research Board."

For more information about the Pennsylvania Wine Marketing and Research Board, contact Kyle Nagurny at (717) 787-2376 or visit the Department of Agriculture's Website through the PA PowerPort at www.state.pa.us, PA Keyword: "Agriculture."

Grant Helps Shenandoah Alternative Farmers Exchange

GAY BROWNLEE
Virginia Correspondent

SHENANDOAH COUNTY, Va. — The Shenandoah Alternative Farmers Exchange (SAFE) recently received a $1,509 grant that will enhance the cooperative effort that three small farming operations are utilizing in a direct market approach to sell customers their own naturally grown meats and produce.

Beef, ostrich, pastured chicken, rabbits, berries, and vegetables are a few items on a long list.

For the first time in 2002, David and Lynn St. Clair of Swover Creek Farms, Edinburg; Willard and Lorna Lutz of Conicville Ostrich, Mount Jackson; and Richard and Sarah Green of EverGreens Farm, Edinburg, will market their products in a cooperative arrangement.

Lynn St. Clair, who wrote the grant, said it was a group marketing grant for farmers who wanted to "bundle" their products.

She explained that the USDA funded project, titled "Bridging the Urban/Rural Divide: Marketing Local Food in the Mid-Atlantic," is a partnership of agricultural organizations that includes, Future Harvest-CASA, the Pennsylvania Association for Sustainable Agriculture (PASA), Wallace Center at Winrock, USDA Agricultural Research Service, extension services in Maryland and Pennsylvania, and the Accokeek Foundation.

The exchange participants adopted a mission statement for SAFE, which says, in essence, while they are developing a cooperative marketing status and making fresh, locally grown produce and meats without hormones or additives available to customers, they also want to promote theirs as an eclectic farming community and promote public interest in agriculture.

Importantly, they also want to use sustainable farming methods to preserve family farms.

That's why Richard Green is becoming an expert at utilizing all the resources at hand in order to emulate the basic patterns taught by nature itself.

"I try to get four or five uses out of a bale of hay," he said.

The Greens retain upward of 2,000 pastured poultry besides egg layers in a flock, a goat dairy herd, pastured pork, pastured rabbits, and more.

Although there are nine children, since their eldest brother has employment elsewhere, eight share the chores with their dad and mother in a home schooling situation where the life lessons they encounter every day also contribute to their educational requirements.

In conjunction with National Agriculture Week on March 16, SAFE conducted a promotional event from which the proceeds will be donated to the FFA Foundation and Ag In The Classroom. It was a spaghetti and ostrich meatball feast intended for the community at the United Church of Christ in Conicville. Many of their own products, except the milk Shenville Creamery donates, were on the bill.

For more information, call Swover Creek Farms at (540) 984-8973, Conicville Ostrich at (540) 477-3574, or EverGreens Farm at (540) 984-3291.

Pa. Potato Stocks Down 13 Percent In April

HARRISBURG (Dauphin Co.) — Total potato stocks stored in Pennsylvania on April 1, 2002 were 260,000 CWT or eight percent of the total fall potato crop, 3,173,000 CWT, 13 percent less than a year ago, according to the Pennsylvania Agricultural Statistics Service.

Of this amount, 160,000 CWT were stored in processor's facilities, 62 percent of the total stocks.

Stocks are defined as the quantity (whether sold or not) remaining in storage for all purposes and uses, including shrinkage and waste and other losses that occur after the date of each report. Stocks may also include potatoes produced in other states. For all states, sales of fall potatoes for all purposes for the past five years averaged 90.6 percent of the total fall production. Shrinkage, loss and home use account for the remaining 9.4 percent. Most seed for use the following year is on hand but remains as part of stocks until planted.

Storage of fall potatoes in the 15 major states totaled 129 million CWT, down 16 percent from a year earlier but less than one percent above 2000. Storage on April 1 accounted for 33 percent of fall production, the same as last year. Disappearance, at 265 million CWT, is down 13 percent from last year, the lowest since 1993. Shrinkage and loss totaled 22.9 million CWT, down 31 percent from one year ago and 17 percent below two years ago.

All About Potting Mixes

Sabine Carey
Certification Assistant

Farmers everywhere are starting or have already started their produce, herbs, and flower seeds for the season, and we've been getting numerous calls about what potting mixes are acceptable.

Potting mixes must be composed entirely of allowed and non-synthetic materials and must not contain synthetic wetting agents, unless they are Omri-listed. Remember, just because it says organic on the label does not mean it is allowed. Look for the Omri logo.

As a certified organic grower, there are three options for obtaining acceptable potting mixes.

1. Purchasing Omri — listed transplant medias.
2. Mixing your own.
3. Using a commercial product reviewed by PCO.

Make sure you have your mixes available well before the time you anticipate using them, so that your planting will not be delayed if a suitable mix cannot be found, or its compliance determined. Plan ahead.

1. The following Potting Mixes/Transplant Medias are Omri-listed:

- GrowPro by Green Technology Group (www.greeentg.com 703-832-0497)
- Sunshine Organic by Sun Gro Horticulture (www.sungro.com 425-373-3614) include: Sunshine Organic Premix, Aggregate, Basic, Complete, Germination, Planting Mix and Plug, Organic PX-2 and Pre-Mix, Black Gold Coco Blend.
- Millenium Soils Coir by Vgrove, Inc. (905-687-1877 Canada).
- Peaco All Natural Organic Potting Soil, by Peaco Peat Moss and Soils (800-829-0729).

Omri listed wetting agents (present in many potting mixes):

- Therm X-15M (Cellu-Con 559-568-0190)
- Therm X-70 (Cellu-Con 559-568-0190)
- JH Biotech Natural Wet from JH Biotech, Inc. (1-800-428-3493)
- RainGrow Superflow from Bioz Agri Products, Inc. (1-877-232-7651).

To find a current listing of Omri-approved brand name products, go to www.omri.org.

2. You can mix your own.

These are some general mixes based on the Organic Potting Mixes fact sheet from ATTRA. You may want to adapt these to your specific needs:

Recipes:
Seed Starting Mix
2 parts sifted compost
4 parts peat moss
2 parts perlite
4 oz. limestone
Seedling Mix
1 part perlite
1 part peat moss
1 part compost
1 part rock phosphate
1 part worm castings (optional)

The Organic Potting Mixes fact sheet is available by calling ATTRA: 800-346-9140 or visiting www.attra.org.

3. Having PCO review a commercial mix to determine compliance with the NOP.

Most commercial mixes contain prohibited materials in the form of wetting agents, synthetic starter fertilizers and occasional biocontrol agents. If you cannot find an already Omri-approved mix, request PCO to review a specific mix for you. Remember that the review process may be rather intensive, and results may not be available as quickly as you'd like, depending on the ingredients and the research involved.

PCO has reviewed and approved:

Report On First Wine Maker Tech Meeting

LANCASTER (Lancaster Co.) -- On Wednesday, April 24, 21 wine makers met at the Farm and Home Center in Lancaster for the purpose of creating a "wine tech group."

Traveling the furthest were Mike Metil (Michael Charles Winery) and Mike McVicker (Glade Pike Winery), who will be starting a similar group in the southwestern part of the state.

The importance of this kind of a group was brought into focus when Don Chapman, Pennsylvania Wine Association (PWA) president, reported that a state enologist should be in place in the next year or so. With the state being as large as it is, the "wine tech group" may provide a basic platform for that person to work from. The bottom line of our group is "wine makers helping wine makers."

The afternoon's format allowed for candid exchange about wines submitted for group evaluation. The topics discussed were many: bottling (sanitary vs. sterile), SO2 determination (titrets vs ripper vs A/O), acid reduction, filtering, cold stabilization, potassium, use of sorbate, Pennsylvania oak barrels, stem addition, oxidation and MLF.

Other wines were brought just to be tasted and commented on. Conversation was lively, constructive, candid and informal. A great spirit of camaraderie permeated the room.

The time went fast as the information flowed. Information exchanged was valuable to the novice as well as experienced wine makers.

The next meeting will be June 19 at the Farm and Home Center in Lancaster from 2 p.m.- 5 p.m. (one hour was added by request). Bring your wines — problems and trophies, and questions to share with the group.

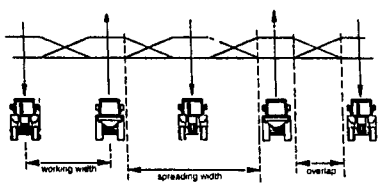
Spreaders are the most accurate broadcast spreaders in the world. The unique pendulum action keeps the spread pattern close to the rear of the machine while at the same time providing a symmetrical pattern on both sides.



The pattern allows "back and forth" as well as "around and around" operation. The "truncated" pattern offsets inaccurate overlap problems, eliminating streaking.

Vicon
Seeder spreaders are easily calibrated for extremely accurate performance.

Rust free polyester hoppers, "DURA-COAT" enamel on painted components with stainless steel metering plates, precision adjustments, and a variety of spouts for a multitude of applications have earned Vicon Superflow seeder spreaders a world-wide reputation as the premier broadcast spreader.

Versatile Vicon spreaders band material in vineyards, orchards and nurseries, as well as spread lime, and salt and sand for winter use.

Experts Have Top Picks

UNIVERSITY PARK (Centre Co.) — University experts have selected what they consider the best.

Melons

Eating ripe, freshly cut melon on a summer's day is an unforgettable experience. Pete Ferretti, professor of vegetable crops in Penn State's College of Agricultural Sciences, recommends his top choices for best melon varieties. Ferretti oversees All-America Selections (AAS) fruit and vegetable trials.

Muskmelon (cantaloupe):

• Athena: Tolerant of powdery mildew and all three strains of fusarium wilt. "This variety retains firmness and has great flavor," Ferretti said. "If you pick this one early it will be rock-hard, so leave it until the fruit falls off the vine as you lift it." This melon has deep salmon-colored flesh.

• Eclipse: Tolerant of powdery mildew and fusarium wilt. Reaches harvest maturity slightly earlier than Athena. Flesh is bright orange.

• Ambrosia: This variety softens fast and will become overripe quickly. "When overripe, it has a medicinal taste," he said. "So pick it when it is partially ripe, when the vine partially tears after a strong tug."

Honeydew:

• Earlidew: Smooth green-gold skin at maturity with pale green, sweet flesh. Pick when fruit slips from the vine.

• Passport: Has green skin with thin corky net that turns yellowish as fruit ripens; pick when partially yellow before stem end splits. Flesh is cream-colored near the seed cavity and mint green near the rind.

Watermelon:

Ferretti recommends growing "icebox" watermelon varieties, which are short-season types that have been bred to fit easily into refrigerators.

• Yellow Baby: 1975 AAS winner. Striped, with a thin rind, Yellow Baby has yellow flesh, small seeds and excellent flavor and sweetness.

• New Queen: 1999 AAS winner. Another thin-skinned striped variety, it has brilliant orange flesh and is very sweet.

• Tiger Baby: A striped, red-flesh type with very good flavor. It is a consistent producer with a thick rind.

• Ferretti recommends that home gardeners not even attempt to grow "seedless" watermelons. "I've been at this a long time, and every time I've tried to grow 'seedless' watermelons it has been a disaster," he said. "The best I've ever managed was 30 percent germination. Right now, only gardeners who specialize in growing melons should try growing 'seedless' varieties from seed."

Bean Varieties

Every year, experts from Penn State's College of Agricultural Sciences select the top garden varieties of vegetable crops at the Penn State Horticulture Trial Gardens.

Ferretti oversees All-America Selections (AAS) vegetable trials and offers his top five recommendations for backyard bean growers.

• Provider: This variety grows as a bush, making it easy to grow and harvest. It produces quality green beans early and has consistently high yields. The beans are round and stringless.

• Bush Blue Lake types: Another class of bush varieties that are standards for canning, freezing and fresh uses.

• Bush Kentucky Wonder: This bush bean produces flat, medium-green pods that can reach seven inches in length and still are tender and flavorful.

• Kentucky Blue: A 1991 AAS winner, this bean is a climbing, or pole, variety. It grows very fast and produces sturdy plants. "This is a very high-quality bean for eating fresh," Ferretti said.

• Fordhook 242: "This is probably the highest quality standard lima bean ever developed," Ferretti said. "It was a 1945 AAS winner, so it has weathered the test of time." The plant tolerates hot and dry weather and produces high quality crops consistently. The bean is very large and has a very buttery flavor, he said.

Ferretti said his choices are disease resistant but advises consumers to check the seed packet or garden center for specific disease-resistance information.

Pepper Varieties

Picking the perfect palatable pepper is a matter of personal preference, Ferretti, offers a personal Top Five list for this year's gardeners. Ferretti oversees All-America Selections (AAS) vegetable trials.

Sweet or bell peppers:

• Gypsy: Ripens to red exceptionally early, can withstand cool growing temperatures, and is a very productive, three-lobed yellow-orange-red fruit.

• King Arthur: Individual fruit are very large, four-lobed and blocky. The plants are highly productive. Ripens from green to red about 10 days later than the smaller, thinner-fleshed Gypsy.

• Boynton Bell: An exceptionally large, blocky, thick-walled pepper with a very robust flavor. Ripens from green to red.

• Super Greggo II: This variety has very thick flesh, up to half an inch, Ferretti said. "They're perfect for stuffing, or you can cut it up for salads," he adds.

• Valencia: Ripens to a shiny orange-tangerine color. "It's one of the sweetest peppers," Ferretti said.

Hot peppers:

• Hungarian Wax: A popular favorite, this pepper is very productive, moderately hot and easy to pick. Ferretti commends it for grilling, frying and especially pickling.

• Super Chili: Ferretti says this variety is very hot, decorative, prolific and attractive all season as an ornamental outdoor plant.

• Super Cayenne II: Another prolific and attractive variety, Ferretti says it's especially suitable for frying, pickling or drying.

• Thai Dragon: These peppers are very small, easy to dry and perfect for Asian cuisine.

• Paprika Supreme: Brilliant red, sweet but spicy and only mildly hot. Ferretti said this variety can be dried and ground into powder for coloring and seasoning.

• Ferretti said most of his choices are disease-resistant varieties.

Stewart's Bacterial Leaf Blight Could Be Severe This Year

WOOSTER, Ohio - Stewart's bacterial leaf blight, a corn disease that can cause significant yield losses in susceptible hybrids, could be severe this growing season.

Ohio State University plant pathologist Pat Lipps said the disease, also known as Stewart's wilt, could cause problems for the state's sweet corn and popcorn growers, since many of the hybrids grown are not resistant to the disease. The disease is usually not as severe in field corn hybrids.

"In field corn, yield losses are usually not extremely severe, but when the disease does damage the plants and they lose significant leaf tissue, a farmer can have yield losses approaching 10-20 percent," said Lipps, who works at the Ohio Agricultural Research and Development Center (OARDC) in Wooster, Ohio. Yield losses in susceptible varieties can range anywhere from 40-90 percent.

"By far the No. 1 management recommendation we have is careful choice of varieties — to select a variety that has some resistance or tolerance to Stewart's wilt," said Celeste Welty, an Ohio State Extension entomologist based in Columbus, Ohio. Welty has listed 84 sweet corn hybrids with ratings for resistance to Stewart's bacterial leaf blight on the Ohio State Veg Net web page (http://vegnet.osu.edu/library/swsc00.htm).

The prediction of the severity of Stewart's bacterial leaf blight is based on data gathered that shows the possibility of high flea beetle populations this spring. The insect, a vector of the disease, overwinters and emerges in the spring to feed on young corn plants, transmitting the bacterium to the crop. Mild winter temperatures increase the chances of high flea beetle populations, thereby increasing the potential for Stewart's bacterial leaf blight.

"A forecasting system developed many years ago looks at weather conditions — average monthly temperatures in December, January and February. When these numbers add up to 90 or better, there's a high probability that large numbers of overwintering beetles will survive and potentially spread the disease," said Lipps.

Data collected from 10 sites in Ohio (Hoytville, South Charleston, Piketon, Jackson, Ripley, Oxford, Delaware, Kingsville, Wooster and Fremont) showed the flea beetle index exceeding 100. "That would put the prediction into the severe area," said Lipps.

"Flea beetles are normally not an economic problem in a lot of field corn most years," said Ohio State entomologist Bruce Eisley, who works in Columbus. "It is almost impossible to keep the flea beetle from transmitting the disease, so all we can do is monitor populations in fields and treat when necessary."

Welty said farmers have three choices when it comes to keeping flea beetles in check on sweet corn: plant seed already treated with systemic insecticide, apply a systemic insecticide into the soil before planting, or apply a foliar insecticide spray.

"If farmers plant a resistant variety, they probably don't have to do anything else. In some cases where a farmer might have to plant a susceptible variety, the easiest and most effective means of control is to plant pretreated seed," said Welty.

The Environmental Protection Agency has approved a federal label for Gaucho, a new seed treatment product that was previously legally available only if the seed was treated in Idaho. "It was allowed for end-use in Ohio, but seed was not allowed to be treated in Ohio," said Welty. "Now it has the federal label which opens up some options for farmers and seedsmen."

If flea beetle scouting is necessary, Eisley recommends that farmers scout their fields to determine flea beetle populations as soon as corn plants begin emerging. Treatment may be necessary when 50 percent or more of the plants (before the fourth-leaf stage) are being severely damaged and five or more beetles per plant are found. Most of the common insecticides labeled on field corn can be used on flea beetles.

In scouting flea beetles on sweet corn, the insect threshold is six beetles per 100 plants on susceptible varieties and two beetles per plant on resistant varieties.

"A farmer needs to scout a lot during the very young stages of the plant, up to the seventh-leaf stage," said Welty. "Also, we recommend farmers scout on warm, sunny days since the insects like to hide during cold, windy conditions."
